BODY STRIKES CURB NEAR HIS BRIDE

Coroner Says 'Suicide'; Brother-in-Law Tried to Prevent Leap

SEATTLE. (AP)—A five-story dive from his newly opened campaign office killed U. S. Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, Seattle's playboy congressman, and closed his erratic career today.

Hatless and coatless, the congressman struck a curbing a few feet from where his bride of 16 weeks, the former Ruby Louise Nix of Texarkana, Texas, waited last night in an automobile for him to come from the office in the Arctic building with his brother-in-law, William Nadeau of Seattle.

Inquest Aug. 14.

Coroner Otto H. Mittelstadt said Zioncheck apparently committed suicide. An inquest was set for Friday, Aug. 14.

Zioncheck dropped to his death a few minutes after Nadeau, who rode with Mrs. Zioncheck to the building, entered the campaign suite to get him to attend a postal employees' banquet.

In his report to the coroner, Nadeau said Zioncheck prepared to leave the office, then suddenly whirled, stripped off his coat, ran and dived through an open window before Nadeau could stop him.

Almost Hits Man

The congressman, turning as he fell, almost hit W. H. McFarlane, a broker, who stumbled over him.

When Zioncheck struck, his wife jumped from the automobile, ran to him, became hysterical. She was taken to a hospital from which she went home a few hours later.

While a crowd gathered, Zioncheck, head crushed, lay on the sidewalk until officers came.

Nadeau said a psychiatrist, Dr. Edward D. Hoedemaker, called by the family to observe Zioncheck, warned them to keep a close watch on him to prevent a suicide attempt. Dr. Hoedemaker confirmed this, but declined further comment.

Nadeau Blames Self

Nadeau blamed himself for not stopping Zioncheck.

"I missed him by a foot," he said.

The office door was locked when Nadeau tried it, he said, but a janitor opened it.

"Marion was sitting at his desk with his coat off, writing a note when I walked in," Nadeau told newspapermen. "Sitting there, I don't know what, impelled me to (Please Turn to Page 2, Col. 1.)

SELL ROGERS HOMESTEAD

CLAREMORE, Okla. (AP)—A petition in county court today asked that the birthplace and homestead of Will Rogers, the late cowboy humorist, be offered at a public sale to pay taxes owed by his estate.

Herb McSpadden, the humorist's nephew and administrator of his Oklahoma holdings, filed the petition yesterday. A hearing was set for Sept. 4.

The petition stated it was necessary to sell the Oklahoma property to pay various taxes, state and federal, which were unofficially reported to be $175,000.

Olympic 'Politics' Charged

BERLIN. (AP)—Charging that politics influenced revision of the American sprint relay team lineup, Marty Glickman, New York Jewish boy, who was left off the quartet with Sam Stoller of Cincinnati, today fired a blast aimed at the American Olympic coaching staff.

While sitting in the press box viewing the United States' record-equalling victory in the trials, Glickman said:

"The heats failed to show the necessity for shaking up the lineup after Stoller and myself long practiced the stick-work. We did not know until the morning's con-

When Zioncheck Orated

When a plunge from a fifth-floor window of a Seattle building last night ended fatally for Congressman Marion Zioncheck, Democrat, it closed a hectic career of the 35-year-old lawyer, the highlights of which were frequent brushes with the Washington, D. C., police on various charges, his incarceration in a Maryland mental institution and his escape from that asylum by leaping over a high fence. Above he is shown on his return to Seattle, opening his campaign for re-election by attacking "the menace of psychiatrists." (Associated Press photo.)

Decathlon Mark Set By Yanks

Associated Press Sports Editor

BERLIN.—Breaking his own world record with a brilliant series of performances in which he amassed 7900 points, Glenn Morris, Fort Collins, Colo., auto salesman, won the Olympic decathlon championship today as his compatriots, Bob Clark and Jack Parker, finished second and third, giving the United States her first sweep of the event in Olympic history.

The 24-year-old former Colorado state football and track star, who just a year ago set a world record in the 100-meter dash, took up decathlon competition just a year ago, surpassed his former world mark in the American tryouts two months ago in Milwaukee by an even 100 points.

Clark, who hails from San Francisco and is a former national A. A. U. all-around champion, captured runner-up honors with an aggregate of 7601 points, while Parker of Sacramento, Calif., had 7275 points for third place.

Drafted from the ranks of the unemployed to meet an emergency, Jesse Owens sent the American team off to a flying start today as it equalled the world record of 40 seconds flat in the 100-meter dash.

Brundage told Donat that, as president of the American Amateur Athletic union, he already had disqualified Mrs. Jarrett.

On what grounds the backstroke ace was being disqualified, Brundage did not say.

Mrs. Jarrett, disbarred from the American Olympic team for violation of the training rules forbidding drinking and late hours, subsequently agreed to report the Olympic Games for a newspaper syndicate.

Mrs. Jarrett said Donat was almost apologetic when he approached the subject.

"I hope you do not intend to do any swimming on this side, Eleanor," she quoted him as saying. "Mr. Brundage told me we mustn't accept your entries as the A. A. U. has taken away your amateur standing."

ference with Head Coach Robertson just who would run. It looks like politics to us."

Asked to elaborate on his charge, Glickman said tersely: "Cromwell's influence looking out for Southern Californians."

He referred to Dean Cromwell, a member of Robertson's staff and track coach at the University of Southern California. Both Foy Draper and Frank Wykoff, who ran today, are his former pupils.

The Associated Press learned that Soller who was 21 today, had been told he would run and was the most surprised man on the sprint squad when informed he had been displaced by Draper.

Tustin Pastor Jailed on Morals Charge Admits Crime With Boy

NASON TAKEN INTO COURT TODAY

Minister Admitted to $10,000 Bail

The Rev. Howard G. Nason, pastor of the Advent Christian church in Tustin and former Scoutmaster, was in the county jail today, charged with a morals crime against a 13-year-old boy.

He was jailed after a delegation of prominent Tustin men called at the district attorney's office and demanded his arrest.

Confesses

Arraigned before Justice of the Peace Kenneth E. Morrison today, the Rev. Mr. Nason was ordered held under $10,000 bail for a preliminary hearing Tuesday morning.

"What they say is true," the minister is reported to have said to Deputy District Attorney James Davis yesterday. "But I was just trying to teach the boys to lead a moral and decent life."

The 12 inate fathers said they could produce "a dozen or two dozen" boys with whom Nason is said to have been intimate recently. The complaint was signed by the father of a 13-year-old boy and alleges the crime occurred "on or about June 1."

Booked as Salesman

The Rev. Mr. Nason was arrested at his home, 555 West Main street, Tustin, yesterday afternoon after the complaint had been filed, and brought to the county jail by Police Chief John Stanton. He gave his occupation as "salesman" when booked.

The Rev. Mr. Nason has been pastor of the church, one of the oldest in the county, for eight or 10 years, Davis said. He is a former Scoutmaster and has always been a leader in boys' work.

At the arraignment this morning, attended only by court officers and a reporter, the Rev. Mr. Nason sat quietly in the justice court jury box while Judge Morrison read the complaint. On being informed he was entitled to an attorney in all subsequent proceedings, he asked that the court appoint counsel for him.

"I have no attorney, your honor," he said, "and I would like the court to appoint one."

Justice Morrison explained it was not within the province of a justice court to appoint an attorney, but assured the Rev. Mr. Nason if he was bound over for trial in superior court, an attorney could be appointed there.

Not a New Party

The organization is to be known as "The National Jeffersonian Democrats." However, Reed was quick to assert that the group was not to be regarded as a new political party.

Sterling E. Edmunds, an associate of Reed, who called the meeting here, named secretary, and a treasurer is to be chosen later.

In addition two national committees will be appointed for each state and state organizations formed "as quickly as possible."

Appeal for London

Although the group did not endorse Governor Landan, a proposal which met opposition from the South, Edmunds said an appeal would be made to Anti New Deal Democrats to support the Republican nominee or to stay at home on election day.

Asked how the organization would be financed, Reed said "we'll have to get some money from people who have it."

Street Grading Brings Rain.
Says Delhi Mayor

Santa Ana's "rain-making" street department was at work in Delhi yesterday.

Matt Lujan, "mayor" of Delhi, contends the surest way to get rain is to have the street department work at Delhi. It went to work yesterday on Halladay between Adams street and Delhi road.

Today it rained.

Lujan recalled that last winter when the street apparatus went to work at Delhi, he predicted rain. Rain came.

Now It's Laguna's Bushy Chests

By FRANK ORR

A big, long Tarzan yell for Laguna Beach.

It's not the shapely gals wandering down the main street in sausage-skin bathing suits that bother the Business and Professional Women's club, which has asked the city council to enforce an old bathing suit ordinance.

It's those bushy chests. Somebody had the beach city wrong. As a tourist attraction, what better view could there be than the sea, the sky, and a shapely beauty?

Baffled by Brush

But the best foliage—ugh. "Those hairy, manly chests ought to be covered when the young monkeys appear on the main streets," said Capt. George Portus, president of the Laguna Chamber of Commerce. "They look awfully funny, but I guess they 'ant people to think they're grown up, or something. If a man gets in the water, he's covered, but walking around the streets in a loin cloth isn't just right. It's only common decency that prompts all this; we've gone over the bounds a little bit and some of us would like to get back to normal."

The fellow staring out from behind a "doormat" may be nice enough personally, in other words, but if an easterner drives through town and is nearsighted, he might think he'd taken the wrong road and hit a jungle.

Almost No Clothes!

Capt. Portus said he'd taken a gander around the streets today and talked with several people. No kinks were forthcoming about the women, which shows Laguna has an eye for beauty. But several people shuddered, pointed to fuzzy apparitions walking along the sidewalk, and indicated that's what they meant.

"The situation today seems to be—ah, rather negligible."

It was Mrs. Daisy Aitken, secretary of the business women, speaking. She, too, has less objection to the foliage-type than to an upright section of sagebrush masquerading as a man.

"Why, they parade around town in almost no clothes," she gasped. "We don't want to dictate, but it seems we ought to have regulations like they do in most other beach cities."

"Some of the women aren't so good, but the men—they're, ah, rather objectionable."

'ANTIS' BEGIN LAUNCH BEAN CAMPAIGN

Democratic Critics of New Deal Organize to Beat Roosevelt

DETROIT. (AP)—A group of anti-New Deal Democrats formed today a campaign organization, with former Senator James A. Reed, as chairman, to carry an anti-Roosevelt appeal into "every state in the union."

In addition, the group adopted a declaration of principles in which it asserted that the Roosevelt administration had disclosed "a perversion of heart and spirit which can neither be remedied nor condoned."

Not a New Party

The organization is to be known as "The National Jeffersonian Democrats." However, Reed was quick to assert that the group was not to be regarded as a new political party.

Sterling E. Edmunds, an associate of Reed, who called the meeting here, named secretary, and a treasurer is to be chosen later.

REBELS PUSH ON TOWARD MADRID

Many Victories in Spanish Struggle

(By the Associated Press)

Gen. Francisco Franco marched today at the head of Moroccan troops in what was described as a thrust at the heart of government power in Madrid.

Other reports placed the general, who led in the first Fascist blow at Melilla, Spanish Morocco, at Seville and also in Morocco attempting to land troops in Spain.

No less enthusiastic reports from the liberals asserted substantial victories were achieved over Fascists in hammering attacks throughout the nation.

Germany "Touchy"

Loyalists were defeated in engagements at Badajoz and Caceres in the south by native troops, Burgos rebels said, but within the province of Badajoz the government declared it had suppressed a rightist uprising in the southwestern section.

Germany joined the French sponsored eight-power neutrality agreement "in principle," but maintained a reserved stand. Russian neutrality must be assured, the Germans said, before a general European non-intervention policy can be effective.

While standing for peace, the Nazi government announced intention to protect its nationals by force if necessary. Eight German warships idled in Spanish waters.

Loyal Victories

The Madrid government's claims of victory were comprehensive. Listed as having been centers of successful offensives were Guadajajara province, in central Spain; the Guadarrama mountains north of the capital—key to the capital's doorways; Zaragoza, rebel stronghold in the northeast where advances were made but actual capture must yet be consummated; Algeiras, on the peninsula's extreme southern tip, where leftist warships fired the town; Cadiz and Huelva, extreme southwest, both provincial capitals being cut off from the sea; Cordoba and Granada, south-central provinces; Seville, Avila and the Balearic Isles.

MAN BLINDED BY BOLT IS RESCUED

Freak Storm Gives City
First Rain of Season;
.11 Inches Fall

A jagged bolt of lightning set fire to a railway power station here today and almost blinded an operator, as a freak August rainstorm poured .11 inch of rain into Orange county's thirsty soil.

Tom Tournat, 806 North Olive street, was given first aid by firemen for inflamed eyes after the lightning crashed into the Pacific Electric power station at Fifth and Lacy streets, burning out two small transformers. Damage to the building was estimated at $25. Service was uninterrupted.

Iowans Frightened

The rain failed to douse prevailing high temperatures, and streets steamed as the showers fell. Rain began shortly after 6 a. m. and hit its peak at 9 a. m., when the power station was struck.

Orange county Iowans, gathered at Bixby park, Long Beach, for the annual summer picnic of the Iowa State society, were frightened worse than those who stayed home. A lightning bolt there split a tree and injured a woman and girl. Mrs. Hazel Cleveland, Long Beach, was burned about the body, and Lois Frank, 13, suffered severe shock. Both were struck unconscious but insisted on returning to the picnic after emergency treatment.

Rain Record

Eleven hundredths of an inch of rain fell in Santa Ana, lifting the August rain total .07 over normal in one fell swoop. It was the first shower of the new season, which began July 1. Normal for August is .04 inches. Last year at this time rainfall totaled .12 inches.

Even a good husky shower didn't help the heat wave. It remained 70 degrees and above from 1:45 a. m. to 7:30 a. m., and kept rising to reach 80 degrees by 11 a. m.

Storm Center

"It's a nice rain," said Farm Advisor Harold Wahlberg. "It's cleaned off the dust, and that's about all you can say for it. It didn't do any harm and it didn't do any good. The beet growers would just as soon not have had it."

Orange county was right in the center of the meteorological excitement, apparently. Los Angeles reported only a trace, and Imperial valley got only .10 inch in spots. A trace of rain was recorded at Newport, and .07 inch fell at Anaheim.

One Day Out of Seven

America recognizes the Biblical story of creation by setting apart one day in the week upon which man shall rest from his labors and pay tribute to the work of the Almighty. Churches dot the land for the convenience and guidance of those who desire to make common supplications. Here in Santa Ana they play an extremely important part in community life. Every Saturday you will find a full page in The Journal devoted to vital news of local churches. See page 9. The Journal leads in church news.

MEXICAN RIOT CONVICTION APPEALED

Strikers Apparently Not to Trade Deportation For Jail Terms

Assailing on 12 different grounds the trial at which 10 Mexicans this week were convicted on rioting, Clarence E. Rust, defense attorney, today filed formal notice of appeal with Superior Judge James L. Allen.

Rust gave oral notice of appeal yesterday when three of the Mexicans were sentenced to one year in the county jail and fined $500 and seven others were sentenced to 10-month terms.

Fail to Appear
Today none of the 10 had appeared in court to accept the suspended sentences offered by Judge Allen on condition of voluntary deportation, it was indicated.

Rust's grounds of appeal were contentions that the court misdirected the jury; erred in deciding questions of law; the district attorney was guilty of prejudicial misconduct; a trial judge made prejudicial statements in the presence of the jury; the verdict is contrary to law and contrary to evidence.

Claims Errors
That the verdict is contrary to law and evidence; the court erred in giving each and every instruction to the jury; the court erred in overruling objections of the defense attorney to testimony against the defendants; the court erred in sustaining objections of the district attorney to testimony of the defendants; the court erred in sustaining objections of the district attorney to arguments of the defense attorney to the jury, and that the information does not state facts constituting a public offense.

Judge Allen today ordered preparation of a transcript showing all testimony, opening statements of attorneys, arguments and rulings. This will be forwarded to the appellate court, before which Rust and District Attorney W. F. Menton will place arguments based on the grounds cited by Rust.

MORE ABOUT ZIONCHECK

look over his shoulder and read what he was writing.

"As soon as I saw the first line I knew it was a 'phony'."

"For God's sake, forget that stuff," I told him. "Let's go downstairs."

"I grabbed him and helped him on with his coat and started to walk out of the office with him. But I noticed that he didn't have a hat with him and asked him if he didn't have one. He said he did and pointed over to a shelf, so I started to get it for him."

"At that he broke away and ran for the window in the other room. He's going to do it, I thought. And I started after him. But he didn't wait even to see if the window was opened. He just jumped and I couldn't reach him."

Persons who saw Zioncheck as he went to his office about 6 P. M. said he apparently was in good spirits.

Note Incoherent
A note found in Zioncheck's office read:

"My only hope in life," the note said, "was to improve the condition of an unfair economic system that held no promise to those that all the wealth of even a recent chance to survive let alone live." The corner commented the note was incoherent.

News of the tragedy was withheld from his mother, Mrs. Frances Zioncheck, ill for more than a year. In announcing his withdrawal from the campaign last Saturday, Zioncheck attributed his action to her poor health.

When he filed for office Tuesday, he said he did so because she desired it to prove that he was "neither crazy nor foolish." Arrangements were made last night to take her to a sanitarium.

Married April 18
At the hospital Zioncheck's widow waited.

"Leave me alone. I don't want to see anyone or talk to anyone." She and the congressman were married at Annapolis, Md., April 18, went on a honeymoon to Florida and Virgin Islands and returned to Washington, D. C., only to be separated by his confinement for mental observation. They were reunited June 3 here, after he escaped from the Sheppard and Enoch Pratt hospital at Towson, Md., by jumping over a wall.

King county Democratic club officers arranged memorial services today.

Funeral Not Set
In the national capital, Kenneth A. Romney, sergeant-at-arms of the house, said he expected Speaker Bankhead of Alabama to name a committee of representatives to attend the funeral which had not been set.

In a pigeon hole in the coroner's office there was an envelope on which was written: "Case No. 1208. M. Zioncheck." A memorandum named its contents as "one wrist watch. Cash—80 cents."

STARTED ECCENTRIC
ANTICS NEW YEAR'S EVE
WASHINGTON, (AP)—When Rep. Marion Zioncheck jumped a seven-foot wall and escaped from a mental hospital at Towson, Md., physicians there expressed concern about the effect the act would have on the sick man's condition.

Until last New Year's eve the capital had regarded Zioncheck as

One of Zioncheck's 'Busy Days' at the Capital

Above are five scenes taken on one of the late Rep. Marion Zioncheck's "busy days" earlier this year at the nation's capital. It all happened when he failed to appear in traffic court on a charge of speeding 70 miles an hour and the police were ordered to "bring him in bodily." The five scenes tell the picture story of the results. The representative decided to take Police Sgt. George Helmuth for a fast ride in his new roadster (upper left) and got involved in an argument. Then he posed for photographers to show what he would do to Helmuth (upper right). He went into real action (lower left) behind the bars (center) after he created a disturbance. But he finally got out of jail (lower right) in fines assessed against Zioncheck for speeding and contempt of court.

WATSON DEATH ACCIDENTAL

Death of Jack Watson, 58, fatally injured under his heavy truck when it overturned Wednesday, was termed "accidental and unavoidable" in a report of a coroner's jury filed today. The jury, meeting at an inquest yesterday afternoon, ruled no other drivers were responsible for the death.

Watson was pinned under his truck near a detour south of Huntington Beach as the truck swerved and skidded on loose dirt. He died three hours later of a crushed chest and other injuries.

Condition of Elias Salazar, 35, Garden Grove, seriously injured Wednesday night in a crash at Ninth and Lamson streets, was reported slightly improved today, although he was still unconscious from a skull fracture.

John Diaz, 12, Los Angeles, was given first aid at the county hospital last night for face lacerations incurred when he struck the windshield of a car in which he was riding near Stanton. Linda Stranske, Anaheim, was also given treatment at the hospital for scalp lacerations incurred when she struck the top of a car near the Martin airport yesterday.

a fairly quiet, studious legislator, though sometimes sharp-tongued in debate and prone to object vigorously on the floor to measures he opposed.

But late at night on the holiday eve, he suddenly took command of a telephone switchboard at an exclusive apartment house, awakened all the tenants—and was arrested.

Then began the long series of eccentric adventures. The nerves of the police were on edge as Zioncheck's big roadster careened through the streets at breakneck speed, resulting in several clashes with the law.

After he married Miss Ruby Louise Nix, PWA stenographer, and departed on his honeymoon, he was arrested twice on speeding charges, and in Puerto Rico was challenged to a duel by a property owner indignant because Zioncheck had driven through a locked gate.

Still pending against him in Washington at the time of his death were assault charges preferred by Mrs. Benjamin Scott Young, magazine writer who had sub-let her apartment to him.

Charging that Zioncheck had "ruined" the place, Mrs. Young sought to have him leave. She later told the police he "called me vile names and stood on me."

After further bizarre adventures here and in New York, Zioncheck gradually became more eccentric until he finally called at the White House with a "gift" of empty beer bottles and moth balls for President Roosevelt.

Confined in Gallinger hospital here for mental observation, he later was transferred to the Maryland institution in a strait jacket.

CONFESSES HE SLEW THREE

WABASH, Ind., (AP)—Deputy Sheriff Vere Howell announced Friday afternoon that Harry Singer, 35, has confessed he killed his employer, Fielding Wesley, 45; Wesley's wife and their small daughter. The Wesleys disappeared from their farm home near Roann about 10 days ago.

State police and Wabash county officers arrested Singer yesterday after neighbors became suspicious. They reported to officers that Singer had sold the Wesley automobile, livestock and hay. Officers said they also learned several exploded shotgun shells had been found in a straw stack on the Wesley farm, and that there were bloodstains on the floor of the Wesley home.

Howell declared Singer said he killed the Wesleys about three weeks ago with a shotgun and

RALLIES AFTER BLOOD GIFT

His strength bolstered by a blood transfusion secured by a KVOE emergency broadcast Thursday night, 2-year-old Daniel Laurent was reported improving today at St. Joseph's hospital, where he is seriously ill with pneumonia.

Four ounces of blood from the veins of Gaylord Hicks, Santa Ana grocery clerk, saved Daniel's life Thursday night, after 60 persons had offered to give their blood, within 90 minutes after the KVOE broadcast.

Today Daniel felt much better, hospital attendants reported. He smiled his gratitude at having been saved, and physicians felt a few more days would start him definitely on the road to recovery.

He Won't Forget to Check This Car

Harry E. Beuter, 45, 501 South Broadway, state traffic checker, found one extra car to check yesterday.

Beuter was sitting on a cement "island" in a Garden Grove service station when an auto driven by Sebald L. Cheroske, 45, Los Angeles, backed into him, inflicting minor cuts and bruises.

BANNERS FLY COTTON IN, NEBLETT OUT, IS NEW PREDICTION

By ROCH BRADSHAW

With swaying banners of Our Lady of Guadalupe carried by each division of the Mexican Young Men's Catholic association, Delhi Mexicans and their visitors will parade Aug. 16 as part of the jornada social being planned to honor Bishop J. J. Cantwell, head of the Los Angeles and San Diego diocese.

Mass at 7 a. m. will be conducted by His Excellency, J. de J. M. y Zarate, Bishop of Huetjutla, Mexico. Mexican and American flags will be carried in the parade, starting from Central avenue and Halladay street.

Invite Visitors
The NYA boys' band will play, setting the pace for branches of the young men's association that will take part in the parade.

Official prayers of the association will open first assembly of the day, with Bishop Zarate, Mayor Fred Rowland of Santa Ana, and visiting priests as guests. J. Arroyo, acting president of the pro-jornada committee will welcome the guests. Bishop Zarate, Father Guadarrama and P. Quintana will speak. Mexican children will recite.

To Give Comedy
Following luncheon, an afternoon assembly is planned, with Fr. Ignacio M. de Azumendi, San Diego; Fr. Enrique de J. Ochoa, and Fr. David G. Ramirez as speakers.

An oratorical tournament will be conducted for the young men, and a comedy will be presented by Chindo and company.

Colthurst Given Bourbon Post

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Wallace Colthurst, of Oakland, was elected national committeeman by the Young Democrats by California, meeting in campaign conference here today. Colthurst succeeds Robert Higgins of San Mateo, who resigned to be a candidate for the state assembly.

The delegates to the conference were to meet in the municipal auditorium this afternoon to elect United States Senator William Gibbs McAdoo of California and United States Senator L. D. Schwellenbach of Washington.

The delegates, representing 88 clubs with a membership of 25,000, went into executive session during the forenoon. The afternoon session was to be open.

Alfonso Goes To Germany

BERLIN, (AP)—Former King Alfonso of Spain returning from this evening traveling by automobile, ostensibly to attend the Olympic Games.

An automobile which followed that carrying the former monarch from a castle in Czechoslovakia bore a Spanish license plate. The occupants of the second machine were not identified.

The German foreign office earlier in the day had characterized as "foolish" rumors that Alfonso was coming to Berlin to confer with Chancellor Hitler.

Right Name, Wrong Farley
VANCOUVER, Wash., (AP)—Courtroom officials here noticed with start that James Aloysius Farley had met in his filing as a candidate for Democratic precinct committeeman from Camas, a nearby town.

But it wasn't the postmaster general and national democratic leader—even though the name, all of it, was the same. The applicant for election is a bonafide resident of Camas.

TO SWIM BAY
SANTA ROSA, (AP)—William Perry, Petaluma athlete, finishes his five day jail term tonight. The youth, who was confined after a national guard court martial convicted him of failing to attend a guard encampment, said he plans to swim the Golden Gate tomorrow in the annual event sponsored by the Dolphin club.

FILES PETITION
William G. Alford today petitioned the superior court to terminate the joint tenancy of his late wife, Caroline, in property here. He asked that the land be placed in his name.

"You'd better watch this boy Ham Cotton."

That's the inside tip going the rounds among Democrats today. The kaleidoscope of politics, they say, is just about ready to shift. When it does, they say Cotton will be more up than he is now, and his erstwhile enemy, Col. William Neblett, will be down. The picture will include Cotton and Sen. William G. McAdoo shaking hands.

McAdoo and Neblett are law partners.

Remember the battle between Neblett and Hamilton Cotton, San Clemente financier and Democratic patronage ace, at the national convention in Philadelphia? Cotton put one over on Neblett there. Then they were reported to have smoked the peace pipe at a party given by Cotton. But it didn't taste very good to either of them, apparently.

Remember how it ended with

STATE SUES P. M. HEADS

LOS ANGELES, (AP)—State Insurance Commissioner Samuel L. Carpenter, Jr., sued eight former officers and directors of the old Pacific Mutual Life Insurance company of California today for recovery of $511,651.

He contended they are liable for that sum because of illegal "transfers, gifts, donations and contributions" in connection with manipulation of stocks and assets of the company.

Carpenter is now administering the affairs of a new company which has taken over the business of the old as part of a general reorganization plan now involved in extensive litigation. The new company is called Pacific Mutual Life Insurance company, the "of California" portion of the old name being omitted.

Taylor, Hodges to Retain Shopper in Bulletin Deal

Henry Hodges and D. A. Taylor today were owners of the Santa Ana Shopping News, while Robert W. Ramsey had bought the weekly Santa Ana Bulletin as the result of a three-cornered transaction.

Hodges and Taylor, who had been buying the Bulletin and Shopping News from Lotus H. Loudon of Anaheim on a conditional sale basis, today announced they had turned the Bulletin back to Loudon, who then sold it to Ramsey. Hodges and Taylor retain the Shopping News.

New Topics for Forum Listed

Subjects for a new series of discussions, to start Aug. 18, were discussed Friday noon at a meeting of the committee on arrangements for the Forum of Political and Economic Education, W. H. Ted Blanding presiding over the session at the Rossmore hotel.

The series on "Collective Bargaining" will close next Tuesday evening.

Subjects for the new series are announced by Blanding as follows: Aug. 18, "Merits and Evils of the Chain Store"; Aug. 25, "Pro's and Con's of the Chain Store Tax"; Sept. 1, "Social Credit"; Sept. 8, "Inflation Ahead"; Sept. 15, discussion of questions on the ballot.

Mother, Wife of S. A. Man, Injured

Telegraphic news of an automobile accident to his wife and his mother was received yesterday by W. A. Smith of the sports department of the Famous department store.

His wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, and his mother, Mrs. Lillian Burkheimer, were returning from a visit at Memphis, Tenn., when their car hit a cow near Prescott, Ark., and turned over twice. They were taken to a Prescott hospital. H. C. Smith of Memphis, brother of the Santa Ana man, wired him that he had gone to Prescott and that the injuries are not serious.

S. A. WILL BE SOURCE FOR RUBBER

The 100 acre plot of guayule on the Irvine ranch, planted more than five years ago, was headed for a real future today.

It will be sent to Salinas, where it will be made into rubber for automobile tires.

Officials of the American Rubber Producers, Inc., whose Salinas plant has begun operations for the season, said today they expected to produce approximately 1,000,000 pounds of rubber from guayule. Manufacturing is expected to continue until the end of the year, converting the guayule bush into rubber for automobile tires, said G. H. Carnahan, president of the Inter Continental Rubber company, of New York. The Salinas firm is a subsidiary of the New York company.

Guayule is being supplied from the Santa Maria, Santa Ana and Salinas valley areas.

The Salina Ana acreage was planted, partly as an experiment. In recent years when the depression has been in evidence, the crop has not been used extensively. With the return of better conditions the guayule production here can be used at a profit, it is hoped.

QUAKE IN EL PASO

EL PASO, Tex. (AP)—A survey today showed no damage resulted from a five-second earthquake which rattled dishes and windows in residential El Paso at 7:40 p. m., last night. It was El Paso's second quake in five years.

Jane Darwell, the character actress has had to learn to smoke a pipe for a movie role.

100 WILL GO TO LEGION CONCLAVE

S. A. Drum Corps and Glee Club to Compete at State Gathering

They'll hear from Santa Ana. Visitors and delegates to the American Legion state convention of posts and auxiliaries beginning tomorrow in Hollywood can't very well help themselves. The Santa Ana drum and drill corps, glee club, and members of the post and auxiliary will be there in numbers.

Glee club and drum corps will take part in competition with units from all over the state.

At least 100 Legionnaires from this vicinity plan to be present at some of the sessions, and 11 delegates and eight alternates from Santa Ana post will be registered, together with leaders from other Orange county units.

Alternates are D. W. Tubbs, Andrew Lykke, Hunter Leach, Robert H. Sandon, Jim Anderson, Ray Walters, Clement Hill and Frank Kelly.

West Blasts at Opponents in Riverside Talk

N. E. West, Orange county supervisor and candidate for congress on the Democratic ticket, Thursday night loosed a blast at his Democratic opponents in a speech before the Democratic Women of Riverside county.

"Sheppard poses as a Democrat," declared West, "and then tells his followers 'I don't give a darn for the Democratic or Republican parties.'" He attacked Harold P. Thorsen of San Bernardino as giving his experience as a relief official as a qualification.

"Millions of people have had the same experience with relief as Mr. Thorsen, only they were on relief and not drawing a good salary for administering it," declared West.

Sharps and Flats From The Political Bandwagon

INVITE GARNER, KNOX TO SAME PLATFORM

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (P)—The United Retail Merchants association has extended an invitation to Vice President John N. Garner to speak on the same platform with Col. Frank Knox, Republican vice presidential candidate, here Aug. 19.

VOTE OUR WAY, OR GET OUT! SAYS TOWNSEND

CHICAGO (P)—Dr. Frances E. Townsend's followers today were enjoined to quit the old age pension organization if they desired to support President Roosevelt or Gov. Alf M. Landon in the presidential campaign. In a statement issued here, Dr. Townsend called for the resignations of any members of his group who wished to back congressional candidates who are not pledged to the Townsend plan; "who wish to play party politics by supporting Candidate Landon, who has not committed himself to the Townsend scheme," or "who desire to vote and work for the election of President Roosevelt, who is known to be violently opposed to our program."

JENCKES ACCEPTS COUGHLIN BET TERMS

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (P)—Frederick L. Jenckes of this city telegraphed Rev. Charles E. Coughlin he would be willing to limit a $25,000 Lemke-Landon voting bet to Rhode Island and gave the radio priest until Aug. 18 to raise his share of the wager. If the bet now goes through, it stands that Mr. Jenckes bets $15,666.66 against Mr. Lemke's $25,000. Mr. Landon will poll more votes on the Republican ticket in this state than William Lemke will on the Union party ticket.

CHARGE BRANDS G. O. P. UNLAWFULLY FALSE

WASHINGTON (P)—Secretary Ickes issued a statement declaring "unlawfully false" what he called a Republican national committee charge that PWA "is engaged in a 'shake down' of Indiana business men to pay for newspaper advertising." A statement by the Republican committee said in part that "New Deal pressure men having contractual relations with the PWA to pay sums ranging all the way from $50 to $250 to defray the cost of propaganda to be distributed in that state in the guise of PWA advertisements."

BAR GROUP CALLS NEW DEAL 'UNCERTAIN'

WASHINGTON (P)—A majority report by a special committee of the American Bar association held that what it called "novel legislative and governmental trends" of the New Deal were "just as uncertain today" as they were two years ago. The conclusions of the committee majority were challenged in a minority report, contending that the majority statement "concerns itself with a short range attack on surface trivialisities."

ALF AGREES TO F. D. R. MEETING

TOPEKA, Kan. (P)—Advised of President Roosevelt's intention to invite him to a drought conference, Gov. Alf M. Landon told newsmen late yesterday that "if there is any meeting, anywhere at any time of benefit to Kansas, I will attend as governor of Kansas."

The Republican nominee gave his comment at a press conference, shortly after he had been told of President Roosevelt's statement that the Kansas governor would be among those invited to an Iowa conference on the drought early in September.

"Job Comes First"

Reading from notes on a pad, Landon said:

"If there is any meeting, anywhere at any time of benefit to Kansas, I will attend as governor of Kansas. Kansas has cooperated in every instance with the federal government and all its agencies dealing with any emergency or relief measure."

Landon has an eastern speaking tour scheduled for late August. Asked whether he had any engagements for early September, the governor replied:

"My work as governor of Kansas comes ahead of anything else I am doing."

Second Meeting

A drought meeting between the two presidential candidates would be the second time Roosevelt and Landon have faced each other at a conference table.

In 1933, Landon said he accepted an invitation extended oil state governors to a Washington conference. At that time, he said, he called on the chief executive accompanied by Senator Arthur Capper.

POLICE REPORTS

Two Mexican boys who took part in a rock fight on West Eighth street yesterday were questioned by police and taken home. Neighbors reported the rocks had broken several windows.

A practically new sedan, with only 33 miles on the speedometer, was checked by police yesterday after officers found it apparently abandoned at Seventeenth and Louise streets. It was registered to J. H. Howland, Los Angeles, but police there were unable to locate the owner. The car was reported gone several hours later, however.

A blond, 16-year-old boy was sought for questioning by officers today, following a report by Mrs. Evans that a youth had molested her last night. She was returning to her home, 619 South Main street, she said, when the youth accosted her and she fled.

"I'll leave this car parked here as long as I want to," a guest at a downtown hotel is reported to have remarked to the clerk when the latter warned him against overparking. The car was later decorated with a citation, police reported.

Treche Hamed, Los Angeles, who was allegedly attempting to peddle bedspreads and lace curtains without a city license, agreed to leave town rather than pay a license fee, officers reported after questioning him.

Theft of a 24-inch plate mirror from a washroom was reported by the Harris hotel, Fifth and Main streets.

A prowler was reported last night in the vicinity of the Henley residence, 702 East Pine street.

Traffic fines yesterday in city court: Edna May Wegge, speeding, $5; Philip Vaughn, speeding, $5; Jack Chandler, speeding, $5; E. E. Harzike, parking, $1; Harold W. ## Warton Wants Hard Work in Assembly; Jerome Waiting to Cross Campaign Bridges

Harry O. Warton, Anaheim attorney and candidate for the state assembly, is "rarin' to go." He wants to work like—something or other—on the job. In the meantime he's proclaiming the fact that he's a Democrat—and not using window cards.

Supervisor W. C. Jerome, on the other hand, seeking reelection, is specializing on bridges. Not that he's building any. He's just going to cross them as he comes to them.

If Warton gets elected to the assembly, he said, he'll "work like hell" for his district and Orange county. And during recesses he'll get down here and let folks know what the bills are about and find how they feel about them.

He's making the rounds of the Democratic meetings and letting folks know he's a Democrat himself. He's handing out cards, but has decided against either window cards or windshield stickers.

NIPPON NATATORS STEAL U. S. THUNDER

Coates Fans 15
As Stars Blank
Orange Cubs, 2-0

One of the season's largest crowds jammed the Municipal bowl last night to do honor to Jim Coates, and Jim gave thanks in kind by leading Santa Ana's soaring Stars to a convincing 2-0 victory over the Orange Cubs.

Coates was in rare good form. He struck out 15 Cubs, issued one base on balls, gathered a hit, and slammed a screaming line drive into left field to score Tommy Young with the second run of the game in the eighth inning.

The smash, a hard ball that got no more than 15 feet off the ground, was scored an error when Left Fielder Pea of the Cubs let it through his hands. It could have been scored a hit, but Pea hardly had to move to make the catch.

TYPISTS FACE
OUTFIT

The Cubs vaulted Roger Larimer, kid pitching sensation, who before last night's tussle had run up 34 consecutive scoreless innings, faltered against the consistent Stars, yielded eight hits, three passes.

A seventh inning rally on the part of Orange did not bring the Stars back to the Municipal bowl.
When Struck passed out on second base after lining a screaming single into right field, advancing on Coates' only wild pitch. String Jim got his dander up and fanned the next three stickmen in a row.

Santa Ana started out with a vengeance in the second inning, when Young bounced a hard ball to short for a single, and scored on Coats long double into left field. Coates sacrificed Nan to third, but Koral and Ballard fled out in order to end the scoring.

Lacy Reaches Third Hits by Denney and Reboin in the third inning were fruitless when Doc Smith fanned, Preble forced Denney at third, and Young forced Preble at second.

Tommy Lacy got to third for the Cubs in the fourth inning, to be the only Orangeman to reach that exalted position. L. Leichtfuss sacrificed him to second, he went to third on Strucks infield hit, but the danger ended when Pea forced Struck at second.

Ceremonies for Coates were brief. Mayor Fred Rowland handed him a bank book with a substantial opening balance. Umpire Hawkins yelled play ball, Jimmy said
"thank you."

The crowd was estimated at

Managers Moaning Low
With Hartnett and Myers Defunct

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
Managers Charley Grimm and Charley Dessen have a right to sing the blues today.

When every first string man is needed for the stretch drive from here in, one of the most dependable of Grimm's Cubs and one of the same of Dessen's Reds are hospital cases.

The tough luck that sent Gabby Hartnett and Billy Myers to the hospital, is going to go a long way toward sending with them the once-glowing hopes of the Cubs for another National league pennant, and the Reds for a first division berth for the first time in years.

Meysers Gone for Season
Hartnett will be out of the lineup for several days with a foot injury. A foul tip from pitcher George Earnshaw's bat did the damage yesterday, more than wiping out the pleasure of a 14-5 victory over the Cardinals, which cut the Gas House Gang's league lead to two games.

Myers, shortstop sparkplug of the "kid team" that was rocketing along only a few weeks ago, is gone for the season. An intestinal operation will keep him out of action until 1937.

The Reds were little better than pushovers yesterday as the Pirates took both ends of a doubleheader, 5-1 and 1-0, behind the top-flight hurling of Red Lucas, who allowed but five hits in the opener, and Cy Blanton, who gave up six in the nightcap.

Giants Cop Fifth
Grimm has young Ken O'Dea to fill in for Hartnett, while Dessen is calling upon the aging Tommy Thevenow. But O'Dea doesn't have the ability of Hartnett to handle the high-priced Cub pitching corps with the stretch heat on.

The Cubs-Cards and Red-Pirates clashes were part of a considerably curtailed program in the majors yesterday.

The Giants fielded a 15-hit assault at three Phillies pitchers for a 9-3 decision, their fifth straight and their eighteenth in 22 starts, to gain ground on the leaders.

The Cleveland Indians saved their second place grip in the American league with an 8-1 win over the White Sox behind Benny Galehouse's seven-hit pitching, while the Senators nosed out the Red Sox 3-2 in 10 innings, despite Jimmy Fox's thirty-second homer of the year.

All was quiet on the rest of the big league front.

McKinley allowed six hits, of which three were infield bloop, two
Texas leaguers just beyond infield.
McKinley struck out hard-hitting
First-baseman Bell four times.

The Westminister-Anaheim affair was a wild fracas. Anaheim collected 15 singles to 14 for West-minister. Anaheim's Wilbur Stinchfield relinquished his mound position to String McDennell in the second inning, after Westminister

had scored seven times.

Joe Rodgers, fiery manager of the Huntington Beach Oilers, admitted today he made a mistake.
"I signed Bill McKinley as a pitcher," he moaned, "and then used someone else in there when I could have been winning ball games. From now on he pitches."

ster were fattening up batting averages in a wild slugfest last night Pitcher Bill McKinley never let his game get out of control, as the Oilers blasted Olive, 7-3.

Anaheim eked out a precarious victory over Westminister, 11-10.

The Oiler-Grenadier game was featured by a fat sixth inning for Huntington Beach, when five runs crossed the plate. McKinley doubled, Daley doubled, Murray singled, Rodgers was walked purposely, Neva singled, and Bob Smith's long fly hit the final count. Bob Smith scored the lone home run in the second that would have cleared the fence if it hadn't hit the light pole beyond the fence.

McKinley allowed six hits, of which three were infield bloop, two
Texas leaguers just beyond infield.
McKinley struck out hard-hitting
First-baseman Bell four times.

The Westminister-Anaheim affair was a wild fracas. Anaheim collected 15 singles to 14 for West-minister. Anaheim's Wilbur Stinch-
field relinquished his mound position to String McDennell in the

Brick Dust

Here and There With The Journal's
Rambling County Editor

By I. N. (BRICK) GAINES

IT WAS cool in San Juan Capistrano yesterday. Cool and raining. And Judge John Landell's office door was yawning invitingly, so I stopped in to see him, knowing that he could drag up some sort of a story for me out of his almost inexhaustible supply. And he did!

The first story was about the roaring old days in San Juan, when everyone had a good time, and folks had lots of money. Parties of men would come down from Los Angeles to play poker. They'd spend entire nights at the game, winning and losing huge amounts. Always an interested spectator at these friendly sessions was Padre Mut. And, being a good businessman, Padre Mut would reach in and take a share of each "pot" for the church.

That was fine with the players. They were pious men, having a good time, and the slight contributions would save any uneasy conscience.

But, one night the padre's raids on the kitty became more numerous. He was soon richer than the richest player at the table. Stakes became smaller, until, along about dawn, the last cent disappeared into the pockets of the churchman.

The party was about to break up, after a few more drinks of the native vino, when one of the gamblers was seized with a sudden inspiration. He whispered briefly to a companion, and then started a drunken argument with his friend.

"The padre is the greatest athlete in the world," he shouted.

"He is not, I know lots greater ones," the other replied heatedly.

The argument went on and on, until finally one man shouted, "Why, I'll bet the padre couldn't even stand on his head!"

His bet was taken immediately. The padre, an interested spectator up to that time, was drawn into the battle. Finally he agreed to display his prowess as an athlete.

After a couple of trial attempts, the priestly head was on the floor, the feet waving in the air.

And the dollars virtually cascaded out of his pockets. There was a mad scramble, money was swept up from all parts of the floor, and the game went on.

And Padre Mut was a wiser man.

After that Fidel Sepulveda came in and we talked of bull fighting. Not the sort they have in Spain, where the animals are killed, but a more thrilling, and to the participants more dangerous, pastime.

The wildest bulls obtainable were brought down from Bell Canyon, and taken into the old mission courtyard. There Don Marcus Forster would tie $20 gold pieces to their horns, and then the maddened animals would be released. They'd tear out the front door of the courtyard, where they'd be met by a dozen or so cowboys, on foot. Each "fighter" was equipped with a red cloth, and each would attempt to make the bull lunge at him. The beast would charge, and as he went by the men would grab off the money.

If the bull got away without being relieved of his precious cargo, mounted cowboys would race after him, and gather in their share of the loot.

And no one ever was killed at the game!

Some time later, after the railroad had been put through to Capistrano, large parties would travel down from Los Angeles, arriving at the boom town of Capistrano by the Sea Saturday evening. They'd sleep on the sands that night and celebrate all the next day, with festivities usually climaxed by another type of "bull-fight."

As Judge Landell explained, the bull was in earnest, but the men only fooling. They'd wave red flags and then get out of the way before the animal arrived. This was great sport until a bull finally caught up with one of his playmates and killed him. Then visitors took up other lines of sport.

There were lots more stories floating around yesterday, like the one Fidel told about Buffalo Bill's gloves—which, incidentally, are now the property of Frank Forster.

But that's another story.

Lentz Returns From Convention

ORANGE.—Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Lentz returned yesterday from Providence, R. I., where Mr. Lentz attended the convention of Lions International, July 21 to 24. On California night, held in a ballroom in Pawtucket, more than 12,000 Californians were given away, Lentz said. Lions were present from Hawaii, Canada, Mexico, Columbia, and China, as well as from all over the United States, he added.

BEACH GROUP BACKS MOVE TO HALT COAST KELP CUTTING

RESTRICTION OF HARVEST IS URGED

Littered Sands Due to Action of Floating Plants, Is Claim

NEWPORT-BALBOA.—First steps of a campaign to seek restriction of kelp cutting along the Southern California coastline were expected to be taken by beach leaders in this section, it was announced today, following reports that action of the cutters is responsible for littering swimming beaches with kelp-ends.

Community leaders advocate that harvesting of kelp be restricted to the winter and early spring months, when the beaches are the least crowded. Members of the Orange County Coast association are expected to take part in the move, it was reported here.

Inspector W. L. Schorfield, who has been making a survey of kelp-harvesting activities, recently reported considerable activity of the cutters between San Diego and Point Mugu and recommended restriction of the harvest months to aid in keeping beaches clean.

The kelp cutters first started activities along the coastline here during the world war, when kelp was discovered to be a profitable source of potash, which was used in manufacture of explosives. About three years ago, when the cutters had removed nearly all kelp from the county coastline, a strong protest was made by local leaders and the practice stopped until this year.

At present there are several of the cutters in operation in this area, it was reported, with the products of their harvests used in manufacture of medicine.

CENTER PICNIC DRAWS CROWD

GARDEN GROVE.—More than 200 members of the Garden Grove and Anaheim Farm centers gathered at the Anaheim park Thursday evening for a picnic supper, preceded and followed by sports and stunts. Music was furnished by the WPA Old Time orchestra.

Keen competition developed in the before-supper baseball game between the two centers with officials announcing the score tied at the close. The after-dinner stunts were directed by Ross Crane, assistant county farm advisor, with the assistance of the center presidents, H. Clay Kellogg of Garden Grove and A. E. Christensen of Anaheim.

CLUB MEETS AT BARBER CITY

BARBER CITY.—Members of the Woman's club met at the clubhouse Wednesday afternoon for a short business meeting followed by a social hour with Mrs. E. W. Johnson and Mrs. Floy Hilborn costesses.

ANIMAL SHELTER BIDS TO BE OPENED AT LAGUNA

LAGUNA BEACH.—Awarding of contracts for construction of an animal shelter and consideration of plans for taking over the library building on First street, are listed among matters scheduled to come before the city council at an adjourned meeting set for Wednesday evening.

Formal approval of an agreement entered into between the city and a San Diego concern for wrecking and removal of the old fishing pier at the foot of Aster street is also listed on the calendar, it was learned.

Plans and specifications for construction of the animal shelter, at an estimated expense of $800, have been approved by the supervisors, the Laguna city council, and the county health authorities.

The project will be distributed over separate contracts for the concrete and the carpenter work, and be handled as a health emergency measure, it was added.

J. K. Matheson and E. C. Linthicum of San Diego, today were expected to sign an agreement drawn up by the city for the removal of the old pier. There is no compensation attached to the work except salvage of steel and lumber.

Negotiations between the city and the Laguna Beach Library association for the former to acquire title to the library property, lot and building, with a $1000 mortgage resting against the same, are nearing completion, it was intimated.

ELECT TONIGHT CASTO ELECTED AT LAGUNA

LAGUNA BEACH.—Featured by election of officers for the ensuing administration year are annual meetings of two well known civic organizations, the Laguna Beach Art association, and the South Coast Improvement association, both scheduled for this evening.

The meeting of the art association will be held at 7:30 p. m. at the galleries on Cliff drive. Members of the improvement association will meet at 6:30 p. m. for an outdoor dinner at the recreation courts, Three Arch bay, to be followed by a business session.

George Emmons, retired Pasadena and Laguna Beach capitalist, has been nominated for presidency of the art association. Other nominations by the committee include Virginia Woolley for first vice president; Roy M. Ropp, for second vice president; Maud Robertson, treasurer; Ralston Volmer, secretary; Ted Cook, Helen Smith, Tom Craig and William A. Griffith, directors.

Capt. George A. Portus is president of the South Coast Improvement association, made up principally of property owners living in the South Laguna section.

Lease Station At Barber City

BARBER CITY.—Mrs. A. N. Olson has leased the gas station and grocery store, recently operated by Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Kolburn, to J. Carpenter and Hubert Tyler.

Mr. Carpenter is a former resident of Tennessee, and Mr. Tyler is employed on the Hellman ranch.

Orange D. U. V. Group Meets

ORANGE.—Daughters of Union Veterans met Friday in the basement of the city hall, with articles for welfare work made by the group. A luncheon was served at noon, Mrs. Abigail McAdoo presided at a business meeting.

Family Returns To Westminster

WESTMINSTER.—Mr. and Mrs. Orion Bebermeyer, Mrs. Lulu Wakefield, mother of Mrs. Bebermeyer, Helen Reiton and Billy Max Bebermeyer, returned Wednesday from a three weeks' visit with relatives near Salina, Kan.

HAVE BARN DANCE
VILLA PARK.—An old fashioned barn dance was given by 22 young women at the Billingsley Ranch School for Girls Thursday evening. The girls and their escorts danced in the large barn on the ranch. Old fashioned games were played, and punch and cookies served.

ELECTION OF TEACHER IS SLATED

LAGUNA BEACH.—Election of an elementary teacher to take the place of Miss Wilberta Main, retired on account of disability, and discussion of a proposed working agreement with parents in the matter of handling injuries to students incidental to athletic activities, are scheduled for a meeting of the board of education set for Wednesday, Aug. 19, it was learned today.

Miss Main, inquiries disclosed, is suffering from an impaired eyesight, which necessitates her retirement from teaching.

Formal adoption of the 1936-37 school budget, calling for expenditures aggregating $106,095, will necessitate a small increase in the tax rate, somewhere between 5 and 12 cents, it was explained. The present rate is $1.34.

Out of the total amount of the new budget, not less than $19,600 will be used to complete financing of buildings now in the course of construction, it was pointed out.

PLAN OPERETTA AT ORANGE

ORANGE.—An operetta, "Queen of the Garden," will be produced Wednesday evening under direction of the Orange playground supervisors, headed by Miss Martha Steele, it has been announced. The play will be given in the auditorium of the Maple street school at 7:30 o'clock.

The cast includes 20 girls, who will sing and dance. Miss Mary Robinson is accompanist. At the same time handwork done by boys and girls attending playgrounds at both the Intermediate and Center Street schools will be on exhibition.

Members of the cast of the operetta are Louise Wood, Mary Zimmerman, Vera and Vera Roger, Betty Reck, Barbara Torrence, Aline Hewlett, Mildred Dohm, Pauline Kerns, Ella Maddox, Barbara Wilber, Henrietta Hewlett, Jean Oswald, Julia Ann La Ferney, Gertrude Eisenbraun, Vivian Hibben, Arden Wescott, Shirley Baines, Myrth Stinson and Gwendolyn Goode.

WESTMINSTER.—Mrs. Ray Finley spent Wednesday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Baker, Jacumbra, and upon her return was accompanied by her daughter, Charlene, who had been the guest of her grandparents for several weeks.

CASTO ELECTED LEGION HEAD

ORANGE.—James W. Casto, El Modena, will head the American Legion Post here as commander for the coming year, it was announced following election of officers Thursday night. He succeeds David Fairbairn.

Bert Hodson was chosen first vice-commander; H. A. Ozmun, second vice-commander; Edwin Wescott, adjutant and finance officer; Dayton Ditchey, chaplain; George Bickford, historian and John Eltiste, sergeant-at-arms. Paul Muench and Logan Jackson were re-elected members of the building committee. Other members of the executive committee are Ewald Wegner, Lynn Wallace, Henry Appel and Earl Hobbs.

Delegates to the state convention to be held in Hollywood next week are James Casto, Edwin Wescott, Henry Appel and Vernon Shippee. Alternates are H. D. Bryant, George Carlson, Bert Hodson and Earl Hobbs. Installation will be held at the first meeting in September.

RELIEF CORPS CLUB MEETS

WESTMINSTER.—Mrs. Lola Vail was hostess to members of the Woman's Relief corps bridge club, this week for the fortnightly exchange luncheon and bridge game.

The group included Mrs. C. C. Murdy and Mrs. H. O. Chamberlain, Westminster; Mrs. Daisy Ladew, Huntington Beach; Mrs. Floy Hilborn, Barber City; Mrs. Florence Merriman, Mrs. Gladys McDonald and Mrs. Mabel Johnson, Orange.

Mrs. Merriman was awarded first prize and Mrs. Johnson received the consolation.

Grove W.R.C. Has Monthly Meeting

GARDEN GROVE.—Members of the W. R. C. gathered at the home of Mrs. Goldie Cornett for their monthly day of relief sewing Thursday. At 6:30 o'clock steaks were friend and served with a potluck menu, at tables arranged in the yard.

Attending were Misses Eleanor Hayes, Jennie Clark, Helen and Kathryn Claes, Corrine Cornett and Emily Cox of Covina, Mesdames Lillian Lovett, Anola Nearning, Clara Olson, Bertha Collins, Loretta Ferris, Alice Rutledge, Lucile Carter, Anabel Bryan and Mary Clark.

CALL ON PARENTS
WESTMINSTER.—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Richards and baby, Hollywood, were recent guests of Mrs. Richards' parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Finley.

Mrs. Ray Reafsnyder Feted At Garden Grove Shower

GARDEN GROVE.—Complimenting Mrs. Ray Reafsnyder, Mesdames Virgil Sparks, John W. Mitchell, Allen Goddard and Wayne Reafsnyder entertained at a layette shower Thursday evening in the Wayne Reafsnyder home on College avenue. Gifts were presented in a bassinnet.

Bridge was played and prizes awarded Mrs. R. Treece, Mrs. A. Eldelson and Mrs. Al. Bradley. Tiny storks decorated the refreshments, served at the small tables appointed in colors of red, green, blue and yellow.

Invited to the party were Mesdames Joe Harliss, Doris Mueller, R. Treece, Albert Bradley, and Miss Lois Reafsnyder, Santa Ana; Mesdames Juanita Harmon, Anaheim; Manley Natland, Long Beach; Howard Barnes, Brea; E. W. Edwards, Los Angeles, and Leonard Natland, Pico.

Also Mesdames J. O. Arkley, T. C. Natland, Fred Reafsnyder, Ray Johnson, J. C. Kraushaar, Leslie Wright, Howard Moore, William Noble, Robert Smith, Rodney Collins Delbert Wilkinson, Emmett Smith, Florence Faulkner, Charles Lake Harvey, Emley, Evelyn Geren, Leighton Phillips, Hubert Head, Misses Frances Dungan, Helen Knox, Mabel Head and Joyce Arkley, Garden Grove.

PLAN OPERETTA AT ORANGE

ORANGE.—An operetta, "Queen of the Garden," will be produced Wednesday evening under direction of the Orange playground supervisors, headed by Miss Martha Steele, it has been announced. The play will be given in the auditorium of the Maple street school at 7:30 o'clock.

Remodel Homes At Barber City

BARBER CITY.—Several homes here are being improved by their owners. Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Threder are remodeling their house and adding two bedrooms, a bathroom and breakfast room and adding a pergola to the front of the house.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Callison are adding a room to their home and otherwise improving it. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Phelps are having their residence redecorated.

BRANCH BANK PLANNED AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT-BALBOA.—Establishment of a branch bank at Newport Beach was expected here today, with announcement of purchase of a lot at 22nd street and West Central avenue by the Capital Company, subsidiary of the Bank of America.

The new bank will not interfere with operation of the present branch in Balboa, according to bank officials.

Work will start within a short time on a $10,000 building on the property. Growth of the Newport community and excellent prospects for further development of the section were given as reasons for the move.

HOME PLANNED AT LAGUNA

LAGUNA BEACH.—Included among building projects now under consideration is construction of a residence for Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Vincent on their property located at 613 Coast Boulevard, Legion, close to the intersection of Legion street, it was learned today.

The Vincent property, overlooking the ocean, extends from the boulevard to the beach. Because of its wide frontage, measuring 75 feet on the boulevard, and a depth of more than 100 feet on the top of the cliff, it is considered one of the choice building sites in the colony. It is owned by Mrs. Harriet Vincent, of Santa Ana, whose property holdings are now administered by her son, Roy Vincent, also of Santa Ana.

The building now standing on the Vincent property, occupied by Miss Roxoli Seabury, local artist, will be torn down, it was stated.

Leota Hemphill Leaves on Trip

BARBER CITY.—Leota Hemphill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alec Hemphill, left Thursday with her uncle, John Hemphill, Long Beach, for a motor trip to Idaho where Miss Hemphill will be a guest of her grandparents for six weeks.

AT LAKE ARROWHEAD
ORANGE.—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Loescher and Clayton Davis, Anaheim, brother of Mrs. Loescher, are spending the week-end at Lake Arrowhead.

NAMES in the NEWS

One of the first things a cub reporter learns is that names make news. There are two kinds of names which make news. Names of people. And names of things—products and services—things which touch you more closely than the thunderings of a Senator or the escapades of a Prince.

Look through the advertisements in The Journal and you'll see names you've known most of your life. Dependable names—names that stand for value—announcing improvements in quality, improvements in service, new and better ways to perform old household tasks, ways to save money and raise your standard of living.

Follow the news those names are making, day after day. Read the advertisements regularly, and use them as millions of other people are doing—to keep up-to-date in the world of goods and services; to save time, effort and trouble in shopping; to help budget your expenditures and get the most for your money.

cluded in the presentation will "Lorelei," "Carry Me Back to Virginia" as sung by John Pman, "Cowboy's Meditation," "Du Leigst Mir Im Herzen," "Bonlight and Roses," "Villia" and "ha Oe."

Miss Bernice Summers Becomes Bride of Findlay Walker This Afternoon

Lovely Gifts of China Are Presented to Bride-Elect

As one of a series of interesting pre-nuptial courtesies which are honoring Miss Helen Spangler, bride-elect of Don Plumb of Tustin, before their marriage on August 22, Miss Virginia Curry entertained a large group of friends last evening in the solarium of the Santa Ana Country club.

Bouquets of garden flowers in pastel tones were arranged about the sunroom where a dainty dessert course was served before the bride games.

The gift from the group to the honored guest was a set of Spode china with service for four, presented to her during the evening.

Invited to honor Miss Spangler, who is the daughter of Mrs. Belle Spangler of Laguna Beach, were Mrs. Spangler, Miss Loretta Spangler, a sister, and Miss Elizabeth Gillespie, an aunt, all of Laguna Beach; Mrs. Hugh Plumb, mother of the bridegroom-elect, from Tustin; Mrs. B. V. Curry, mother of the hostess; Mrs. Roger Hearne of Riverside; Mrs. Remington Mills (Harriet Gruettner) of Hermosa Beach.

Mesdames Robert Guild, Q. L. Hardy, Crawford Nalle, Joseph Irwin, William Jerome, Jr., Edward Adams, and Charles Bain, Jr., and the Misses Eleanor Ralston, Marcia Huber, Barbara Horton, Billie Hamon, Marguerite Hardin, Prudence Drews, Louise Comito, Beth Emison, Ruth Owens, Bernice Summers, Betty Wiswall, Georgina Irvin, Barbara and Louise Rapp, Charlene Lowell, Ruth Baker, Jeanette Lewis, Barbara Davis, Dorothy Preble, Martha Wallingford, Katherine Harbert, Mary Jane Baker, Joan Baker, Irene Ravenkamp and Dorine Haupt.

Miss Barbara Horton won the first prize in contract and Miss Irene Ravenkamp first in auction, both awards being lovely bottles of imported perfume.

MRS. HEFFNER PRESIDES AT DESSERT BRIDGE

Fall yellow and burnt orange tones appeared on the party scene yesterday when Mrs. Robert Heffner chose the autumnal tones for a pretty dessert bridge party at which she presided in her home on West Eighth street.

She seated her guests at tables for four, each spread with linens in pastel shades and centered with pottery bowls of yellow and blue blossoms. Bridge tables and score pads were in the same color combination.

Prizes for the afternoon's play went to Mrs. Carl Conner, winner of high award, and Mrs. Joe Lister, second high.

A guest of honor at the delightful afternoon affair was Miss Adrian Mouron of Los Angeles, who is a house guest of Mrs. Heffner; others sharing in her hospitality being Arthur Wade, Perry Davis, Mervyn Bryte, E. Fenton Dean, Harold Moomaw, Don Edwards, Clarence Sackerson, Kenneth Coulson, and Mrs. Lister and Mrs. Conner.

NEW JERSEY VISITORS HERE FOR WEEK-END

Mr. and Mrs. John McCarty and son, Jack, of 612 West Washington, are entertaining as their house guests this week-end Mrs. McCarty's sister, Miss Hope Tibbott of Clinton, N. J., and the latter's two nieces, Miss Mary Tibbott and Miss Helen Beatty, who accompanied her from her East, and Mrs. Theron A. Tibbott and son, Ted, of Los Angeles.

The visitors, who have been in the West about two weeks, visiting in and about Los Angeles, spent last week-end with the McCarty's here and returned today for another short visit.

Trips to the beach and to San Diego are planned, and Jack and his cousin, Joe Rossiter, have planned an evening of dancing at the Coconut Grove for the younger members of the party.

TRIPS PLANNED FOR NEW YORK VISITOR

Miss Lena Thomas of 1428 North Broadway and her cousin, Miss Hazel Lewis, here from Syracuse, N. Y., for a visit, went to Los Angeles yesterday to visit the library and Edison company offices to hear Lily Pons in concert in the evening.

They were joined in the city by Miss Frances Emans of Los Angeles, who returned with them and went with Miss Lewis and Mrs. Hazel Northcross, another cousin, to San Diego today for the week-end. Miss Lewis is visiting at the home of Mrs. Northcross.

ST. LOUIS GUESTS HONORED

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Mitchell entertained at a dinner at the Garden of Allah Thursday night, honoring two St. Louis visitors, Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Smart.

Their other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Horace Lee and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Kimball, of this city.

BUSINESS CLUB PLANS PICNIC LATER IN MONTH

Still carrying on with the assigned topics for the summer months, "Health" and "Recreation," members of the Business and Professional Woman's club of Santa Ana have planned a picnic dinner and outdoor program for the evening of Monday, Aug. 17, at Anaheim park.

A committee of four—Catherine Stinson, Damaris Beaman, Dr. Stella K. Davis, and Dr. Ada Henry—will prepare the dinner for the picnicers, who are to take their own table service.

In a short talk after the dinner, Dr. Dorothy Humiston of Cedar Falls, Iowa, a visitor in the city this summer, and an instructor in physical education, will give a few pointers on the subjects of health and recreation, and will teach the club members games which will furnish them the exercise they require.

The executive board of the club met Thursday night at the home of Miss Lena Thomas to talk over plans for the yearbook and other club business.

COUVILLONS LEAVE SOON FOR FLORIDA

Mrs. F. E. Couvillon of San Cristobal, suburb of Havana, Cuba, who has been a visitor here for a year, will leave Santa Ana the first of next week for Gainesville, Fla., accompanied by her daughter, Frances, and son, Richard.

Frances and Richard have lived in Santa Ana with their grandmother, Mrs. E. Eckardt, at 1436 North Baker street and attended schools here for 12 years. Mrs. Couvillon dividing her time between Santa Ana and her home.

On this last stay of a year, she was present for the graduation of her daughter from the local high school in June.

Frances will enter Brenau college in Gainesville this fall and Richard will enroll at Riverside military academy in the same city.

Mrs. Couvillon will return to Cuba in September to join Mr. Couvillon, who has been in business in Havana for many years.

KANSANS VISIT AT WALKER HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Walker of 511 East Third street have entertained as their house guests for the past two weeks the latter's niece and husband, Dr. and Mrs. C. Jay Brown, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Forrester, all of Kansas City, Kans.

While the visitors were here, Mr. and Mrs. L. Wilson took the Walkers and their guests on a trip around Newport Bay on their yacht, Lestell, then entertaining them at dinner at the Yacht club.

THOMAS CLARKS HAVE BABY SON

It's a boy—Richard Bryant Clark, who was born this morning to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Clark, 1805 Greenleaf street.

Mother and son are doing well at the Sargent Maternity home, where the baby arrived at 5:30 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred LeVitt, visitors from Mrs. Clark, have been visiting here from their Avalon home, pending the arrival of their grandson.

CANDIDATES TO TELL PLATFORMS

Holding its annual open meeting to acquaint Santa Ana voters with platforms of candidates in the coming election, the Santa Ana League of Women Voters will meet at 7:30 p. m. Aug. 13, in the lounge of the Y. M. C. A.

Speaking in an allotted period of time, each candidate for congress, state senate and assembly, and supervisors will tell their respective plans for office.

W. C. T. U. TO HOLD ELECTION

Election of officers and reports of directors will feature the annual meeting of Santa Ana Women's Christian Temperance union next Tuesday at 2 p. m. in the First Baptist church. Miss Louise Brokaw will preside, and all members are urged to attend.

DE GLADE DAMER
Mrs. O. J. Hawley will be hostess to De Glade Damer club at 2 o'clock Wednesday at her home, 514 South Broadway.

They Are Bride and Brides-to-Be

Helen Furgason, above, is tomorrow's bride, her wedding to Elmer Rittner of Tustin being set for Sunday at the Tustin Presbyterian church. She is the daughter of Mrs. Maude Furgason and Mr. Rittner is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Rittner, all residents of Tustin for many years.

Next Friday will see the wedding of Miss Mary Aitken, above, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Aitken of 1155 West Eighth street, and R. J. Pearson of Fullerton, whose betrothal announced some weeks ago served as the incentive for a series of delightful pre-nuptial courtesies for the bride-to-be.

After the delicious luncheon, which Mrs. Zerman's granddaughter, Archeline Winter, assisted in serving, the guests were seated at six tables for an afternoon of contract bridge.

At the close of the playing, prizes were awarded to Mrs. John Wehrly, Mrs. Clare Johnson, Mrs. Marguerite Borgmeyer, for high scores, and to Mrs. F. P. Nickey, consolation.

Invited guests were the Mesdames Bert Campbell, Waldo Wehrly, John L. Wehrly, John Wehrly, Clare Johnson, Cotton Mather, Alvin Nowotney, E. T. Mather, W. D. Ranney, A. G. Flag, Cassius Paul, M. K. Tedstrom, J. E. Paul, T. A. Winbiger, Marguerite Borgmeyer, A. J. Cruickshank, Charles Norton, David Ball, Roy Hall, Sam W. Nau, A. F. Zaiser, George Wells, C. P. Boyer, Charles Walker, Cood Adams, Clyde Walker and F. P. Nickey, and Dr. Mary Wright.

Mrs. Zerman plans other parties later in the summer.

Chat Awhile With Betty

By BETTY COX

But a smart picture, for what is smarter than black at any time of the year?

From one who knows, and who has been visiting the fashion marts in Los Angeles, came this interesting forecast, with additional word that every dress is to have a coat of its own. Cloth coats with distinctive personalities—with little or no fur, preferring the separate fur neck-piece to the attached collars or cuffs.

Smartness, it seems, is to be uppermost.

Echoes from Hollywood tell us about a tennis match between our own Josephine Cruickshank (of the A. J. Cruickshank family) and Norma Shearer (of moving picture fame). We don't know the score, but we like to have seen the match.

Arrowhead's Santa Ana colony was enlarged again this week with the arrival at the mountain resort of Mrs. Howard Rapp, son, Howard, and daughter, Patty.

They plan to spend the first half of August there, coming down about the fifteenth.

This week's chuckle came from a reminiscence on the part of the wife of one of our supervisors, who recalled a time, less than 20 years ago, when her husband aroused the ire of fellow-Laguinites by removing a few of their choice, but to him, unsightly barns and corrals.

One stood where the Laguna hotel is now located, she remembered, and others were in equal prominent positions in the town. Their removal hurt the civic pride of some of the townspeople who considered them additions to the natural scenery of the place.

I like old barns, myself, and want one of my own some day, but wouldn't they look funny now in the heart of pretty Laguna? There's a lot of romance in a barn, and the older it is the more romantic.

Some few Santa Anans heard an interesting broadcast from Paris recently when the international meeting of the Business and Professional Women's clubs went on the air.

Charles Williams presiding over the meeting, introduced as one of the speakers Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, presenting her as one of the outstanding women of the United States. Women from other countries also talked.

Friends of Mrs. E. A. Watson of Yorba street, Tustin, had a pleasant surprise last week-end when they found her picture, taken in her lovely home conservatory, in the homes and gardens section of a Los Angeles newspaper.

Mrs. Watson is noted for her beautiful gardens, always included in the local garden tours, and her special hobby is raising azaleas and camellias.

MRS. NISSON IS HOSTESS TO EIGHT

Dessert courses for eight were served at small tables centered across the room when Mrs. Clarence Nisson entertained Thursday at her Newport Beach cottage.

Table prizes at bridge were awarded Mrs. Guy Darnell and Mrs. H. G. Wilson. Others present included Mesdames Lynn Ostrander, L. R. Wilson, B. J. McReynolds, Guy Downs, Sidney Russell, and the hostess, Mrs. Chester Dale, absent member of the group, is vacationing in Missouri.

San Diego is the new home of Mrs. Robly Janssen, one of the county's early summer brides. The former Miss Mavis Campbell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Campbell, prominent Orange ranch owners, and her wedding was solemnized in June at the Orange Presbyterian church.

Showboat Is Setting Of Party

Crossing a gangplank from "Sawyer's Landing," the family garage, to "Sawyer's Showboat," the newly redecorated summerhouse, to which signs in the driveway and garage pointed their way, guests invited to join the "showboat party on a cruise to Pleasure Island" found an evening of gaiety and unique fun awaiting them Thursday night in the Frank Sawyer home on Durant street.

Hostesses, greeting their guests in true sailor fashion and attire, were the Misses Yette Blank, Barbara Crawford, Dorothy Gowdry, Ruth Warner, and Margaret Sawyer; and the two who formed the incentive for the party were Miss Georgina Irvin and Ray Cartwright, who are to be married Aug. 26.

Wear Sailor Costumes
The 25 guests donned sailing and ship costumes for the affair, fitting in perfectly with the gay nautical surroundings which have been installed in the attractive backyard of the Sawyer grounds.

Dancing in the garage, which is bedecked with ship's ropes and anchors and other marine paraphernalia, was the popular diversion for the evening hours, and frequent jaunts across the gangplank to the old Mississippi showboat with its fishnets and oars, life preservers and ship's lanterns, added to the fun and excitement.

Between the garage and the "boat" is the garden pond, lapping almost up to the sides of the showboat in the manner of the Mississippi.

Supper at Midnight
At midnight, the activity shifted across the "river" for a supper in the ship's dining room.

A surprise feature of the evening for the bride-to-be was presentation to her of a lovely waffle iron as a gift from the girls of party crew, who included Mrs. Paul W. Hales, Mrs. Joseph A. Knox, the Misses Ruth Baker, Lucille Cook, Gwen Griffin, and Roberta Horton and the hostesses.

Others signing the ships' log included Ted Sawyer of Pawnee City, Neb., a cousin of Miss Margaret Sawyer, out here for a visit on his first leave from West Point; the Messrs. Otto Grigg, Major Anderson, Kenneth Vanduff, Russell Abbey, Elmer Curry, and Jim Gross of Santa Ana; Edgar Barnes and Bob Van Wagoner of Anaheim; Francis Gilbert of Tustin, and the two honored guests.

Play Writers Are Called

Although regular meetings will not be resumed until Tuesday, Sept. 8, and play productions several weeks later, one project sponsored each year by the Santa Ana Community Players has been constantly in the minds of many throughout the summer months.

That is the annual contest for original one-act plays, which each season draws the attention of playwrights in all parts of Orange county.

Contest Opens Sept. 1

September 1 is the opening date for submission of manuscripts, according to A. E. Collins, the organization's business manager, and the contest will officially close for entries Jan. 1, 1937.

The four plays selected as the best will be presented in the Ebell drama program, also an annual event, and selection of the one for first place will follow early in the spring.

Project Is Countywide

Anyone residing in the county may compete, whether amateur or professional, but the play entered must not have been presented prior to its contest appearance. Manuscripts may be left at Shafer's music store, it was announced, or presented to members of a committee to be named later. Length of the play must be not less than 15 minutes and not more than 35 minutes acting time.

John I. Hanson is president again of the Players' organization, and Gladys Shafer will continue as their director.

All interested in participating in the playwrighting contest are urged to start writing now or brushing up on plays they have already prepared. A contestant may submit any number of entries.

NEBRASKANS DINNER GUESTS AT SAWYER HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sawyer were hosts last night to a group of friends from Pawnee City, Neb., among them their nephew, Ted Sawyer, who arrived recently for a short visit at the Sawyer home on Durant street.

The other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Lynell Hare and son, Jack, and daughter, Marilyn, and Mrs. Iva Hare, of Pawnee City; Mrs. A. C. Sawyer and Mrs. Imo Uhl of Long Beach, with whom the Nebraskans are visiting; Mr. and Mrs. John Sawyer and son, Dick, and the host and hostess and daughter, Margaret, and Mrs. Sawyer's mother, Mrs. Laura Kesemann, of Santa Ana.

Ted Sawyer leaves tonight for the east, at the end of his first leave from West Point.

ATTENDING CONVENTION IN HOLLYWOOD

Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Van Wyk of 711 Richmond street are going to Hollywood this week-end to spend the coming week attending the American Legion convention.

Mrs. Van Wyk is a member of the sextet from the local unit which will enter the competition at a concert Monday morning at El Capitan theater in Hollywood. Others in the sextet personnel are Georgia Harvey and Laura Montana, first sopranos; Josephine Lykko and Ethel Brown, second sopranos; and Zola Maag, contralto. Mrs. Van Wyk also singing contralto. Miss Ruth Armstrong accompanied the group.

Fall Blooms Appoint Tables

Mrs. A. N. Zerman of 505 South Sycamore entertained a group of guests at luncheon Friday at her home, seating her guests at small tables covered with dainty linens and centered with small, rose-colored cut glass vases holding arrangements of "cathedral bell" blossoms and maiden hair fern.

A small corsage in the same orchid shades marked the place of each guest.

Rooms of the home were beautifully decorated with baskets of very large dahlias and bowls of pompon dahlias and of giant zinnias.

After the delicious luncheon, which Mrs. Zerman's granddaughter, Archeline Winter, assisted in serving, the guests were seated at six tables for an afternoon of contract bridge.

At the close of the playing, prizes were awarded to Mrs. John Wehrly, Mrs. Clare Johnson, Mrs. Marguerite Borgmeyer, for high scores, and to Mrs. F. P. Nickey, consolation.

Invited guests were the Mesdames Bert Campbell, Waldo Wehrly, John L. Wehrly, John Wehrly, Clare Johnson, Cotton Mather, Alvin Nowotney, E. T. Mather, W. D. Ranney, A. G. Flag, Cassius Paul, M. K. Tedstrom, J. E. Paul, T. A. Winbiger, Marguerite Borgmeyer, A. J. Cruickshank, Charles Norton, David Ball, Roy Hall, Sam W. Nau, A. F. Zaiser, George Wells, C. P. Boyer, Charles Walker, Cood Adams, Clyde Walker and F. P. Nickey, and Dr. Mary Wright.

HOUSEWARMING FOR SCHROFFS

Complimenting Mr. and Mrs. Albert Schroff, prominent officers of the local Standard Life association, members of the lodge and friends gave the Schroffs a jolly housewarming at their new beach home on Balboa island this week.

The visitors carried with them the courses for a dinner, which was served alfresco under the shady trees and drooping hammocks in the yard of the cottage. After dinner they made an inspection of the attractive rooms and the convenient arrangement of the house, and a season of cards in the spacious living room followed.

Suitable prizes were awarded to Mrs. John Baker, Mrs. Frank Harris, Mrs. Claude Jasper and J. Wiley Hays.

Those enjoying the evening included the Messrs. and Mesdames Henry Pankey, Frank Harris, Albert Schroff, John Baker, Wiley Harris and Henry Schroff, Miss Maxine Knight and the Mesdames Nell Smith, Clara McCord, Agnes Collum, Georgia Mills, and Allie Cain, all of Santa Ana; Mrs. Ida Kelsey of Whittier, and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Jasper and Mr. and Mrs. Millard Boyd of San Diego.

D. U. V. TO HOLD OPEN HOUSE

Receiving friends and guests at an open house entertainment from 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, members of Sarah A. Roundabout No. 10, D. U. V., will celebrate the silver anniversary of the organization.

The Sedgewick Women's Relief Corps, affiliated group with the Grand Army of the Republic, has been invited to join in the celebration.

WOMEN'S GROUP PLAN PICNIC

Organizing preparatory to starting the active year, the new Unitarian Women's alliance will meet Tuesday in Anaheim park for a pot-luck luncheon at noon.

All members of the previous organization are being invited to attend, and to join the new group. Those needing transportation are asked to telephone Mrs. Herbert Birt, 2989-J.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO BE HONORED

Young people's day will be observed by the First Presbyterian Missionary society in an afternoon program Wednesday at the home of Mrs. J. R. Moore, 424 West Second street.

Members of the organization will hold their regular meeting earlier in the day, with a covered dish luncheon at noon.

V. F. W. VISITORS AT SAWTELLE

Taking magazines, cigars and candy to veterans, several members of Santa Ana's Ernest Kellogg post and auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, visited at the Sawtelle hospital Thursday.

In the party were Mr. and Mrs. James Sullivan, Mrs. George Irvine, Mrs. Irene Stude, Mrs. McElroy and her niece, Miss Smith, here on a visit from Missouri.

Nuptials To Be Read Late Today at Home of Cousin

The home of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Emison, at 2335 North Park boulevard, its rooms decked with bouquets of white flowers and greenery, was to form the setting late this afternoon for the marriage of Miss Bernice Summers, popular Santa Ana girl, and Findlay Walker of Oceanside, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Walker of Pomona.

EARLY SUMMER BRIDE HONORED WITH SHOWER

Arranging small tables out in the patio, the Misses Betty Boosey and Emily Bouchard presided as co-hostesses Wednesday evening at a lovely shower courtesy for a bride sister of the latter, Mrs. Lecl Boosey (Winifred Bouchard).

The party was given at the home of Mrs. Rena Bouchard, mother of the honored guest and of one of the hostesses, at 213 A street, Tustin.

Clues to the whereabouts of the lovely gifts brought by the guests for the new bride and her new home were concealed in a bouquet of balloons which were popped one at a time by the honored guest as she made her search for the treasures.

At the end of the informal evening, Mrs. Bouchard assisted the two hostesses in serving a dainty refreshment course at the little outdoor tables, each of which was centered with a bouquet of mixed garden flowers.

Guests, in addition to the bride, were Mrs. Helen Johnston, Mrs. Ray Dawson, the Misses Katherine McDermott, Barbara McCarter, Lois Mae Stockton, Barbara Kiser, Betty Sealey, Marjorie Schooley, Mary Knoche, Hazel Whitehead, and Lenore Chambers, and the hostesses and Mrs. Bouchard.

Mr. and Mrs. Boosey were married July 7 in Yuma, Ariz., and have been honored at several nuptial courtesies.

CALIFORNIANS PROGRESSIVE, SPEAKER SAYS

The alert and progressive spirit of Californians was commented favorably upon by Mrs. J. D. Campbell in her report yesterday afternoon at meeting of the executive board of the League of Women Voters at the home of Mrs. A. J. Knight, Orange.

Mrs. Campbell recently returned from a visit to relatives in Ohio, and made her comment in comparing the two states.

Preparations were made for a candidates' meeting to acquaint Santa Anans and members of the league with their platforms. Mrs. Ora K. Heine, legislative chairman, will be in charge of the meeting, slated for 7:30 p. m. Aug. 13, in the Y. M. C. A. lounge.

Serving as officers of the league for the rest of this year will be Mrs. M. E. Greeting, president; the Rev. Julia N. Budlong and Mrs. Harwood Sharpe, first and second vice presidents; Mrs. J. D. Campbell, secretary, and Mrs. A. J. Knight, treasurer.

Departments of league work will be conducted by Mrs. Ora K. Heine, government and its operation; Miss Dorothy Wents, government and international cooperation; Mrs. J. B. Campbell, child welfare; Mrs. Golden Weston, education; Miss Budlong, economic welfare; Mrs. Sam Long, legal status of women.

INTERNE AT CO. HOSPITAL IS MARRIED

Dr. and Mrs. W. D. Springer returned to Santa Ana Thursday from Laguna Beach, where they spent a brief honeymoon following their marriage last Saturday in Santa Ana.

The ceremony which united Miss Shirley MacLennan of Portland, Ore., and Dr. Springer was performed Aug. 1 at the Santa Ana Wedding chapel on North Main street, with the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. L. E. Springer of Boise, Ida., and Mrs. Bergold of Chicago in attendance. The Rev. Earl C. Bloss performed the marriage rites.

The bride, who arrived just recently from the north to be married to Dr. Springer, wore a white sport suit with corsage of gardenias and she and her new husband left immediately after the wedding for their honeymoon. They are now making their home in Santa Ana.

Dr. Springer, a former resident of Boise, is a graduate of the medical college at the University of Oregon, and is now an interne at Orange county hospital.

MOTHERSINGERS PLAN LUNCH

Mrs. Guy Belcher will be hostess Thursday at an open house entertainment at her home, 418 West Second street, for members of the P. T. A. Mothersingers.

All former members and friends of the group are being invited to attend. Each is to bring something for a covered dish luncheon at noon.

Twenty Are Bidden

Twenty guests were invited to witness the ceremony, which was to be followed by an informal reception, also at the Emison home. A beautiful, white tiered wedding cake was prepared for the center of the bride's table, which was spread with a white lace cloth and centered with white flowers and candles.

Later this evening, the newlyweds will depart for a week's honeymoon in the north, returning to Oceanside to make their future home.

Attended Local School

Miss Summers is a popular member of Sigma Theta sorority and a graduate of Santa Ana High school and Junior college. She was affiliated with the Spinners' organization on the jaysce campus. Santa Ana has been her home for 11 years, and she has resided with her cousin, Mrs. Emison, for some time.

Mr. Walker received his schooling in Pomona, attending Pomona college, and coming to Oceanside a few months ago for a position in the Cash and Carry store of Smart and Final.

Guests invited to the wedding today were the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Walker, his sister, Miss Betty Walker, and his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Nesbit and daughter, Mary, all of Pomona; his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Summers, and her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey E. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Emison and daughters, Patricia and Mary Elizabeth, and Rev. and Mrs. Buchanan, all of Santa Ana.

AKERS HOSTS TO MISSION GROUP IN GARDEN

A festive appearance was presented by members of the Missionary society of the Spurgeon Memorial church when they assembled Wednesday at the invitation of the Rev. C. M. Aker and Mrs. Aker at their home, 912 Garfield street.

Meeting in the Akers' garden, where beach umbrellas and a canopy had been erected about an attractive fish pond, the organization held its morning Bible study session, conducted by Mrs. Preble. Mrs. McIntyre led a discussion of "World Outlook" topics. Jubilee circle members served covered dish luncheon at noon.

Mrs. Barnes opened afternoon sessions with devotions. Mrs. Woodward read items from the Missionary bulletin, and information about the Christian Women's Medical college, Shanghai, China, was given by Mrs. Preble, Mrs. Solomon, Mrs. Frances and Mrs. A. Jones.

At Mrs. Fine's suggestion, it was decided that all circles of the organization would hold a joint picnic supper in Jack Fisher park, Aug. 25.

HARWOODS HONORED IN FAREWELL

Mr. and Mrs. Don D. Harwood and Mr. and Mrs. Chad Harwood entertained at a patio steak dinner last night at the D. A. Harwood home on West Seventeenth street, honoring the parents of the two men, Dr. and Mrs. D. A. Harwood, before their departure for New York.

P. T. A. party appointments gave touches of bright color to the table set out in the patio, where places were marked for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hyde, Mr. and Mrs. Clare Johnson, the guests of honor and the four hosts.

Eau De Cologne Has Many Uses

By JACQUELINE HUNT

Probably not one girl in a hundred understands the distinction between toilet water and eau de Cologne, although there is a real difference. Toilet waters are essentially a form of perfume which contains a greater concentration of essence.

The original eau de Cologne, on the other hand, is a compound of citrus oils, usually lemon, orange, bergamot and others, to which is added such fragrances as lavender and rosemary or thyme, the whole having a distinctive, spicy, refreshing aroma.

In modern trends, however, is to make an eau de Cologne with the basic toilet water characteristics. As a result we have new flower-scented ones that are really delightful to use.

A good eau de Cologne has many uses besides serving as a friction after your bath or a summer perfume. It is especially handy now that you are using suntan oil so freely. Tuck a bottle of eau de Cologne and a piece of cotton into your beach bag, and use to remove the oil from your skin when you are ready to come in.

Soothes Headache
Sponge a little on your temples when you feel weary or have a headache. Use it as a skin cleanser, too.

Use it as an all-over body rub after your shower or tubbing. It closes the pores, cools the skin and at the same time leaves a precious fragrance. Drop a few drops into the rinse water when you wash your lingerie and you will have an elusive perfume about you at all times.

Brush Hair With It
Add a dash to your hair brush when you set your waves and it will give your hair a pleasing and elusive scent.

Eau de Cologne is nice for scenting your bath. Sprinkle a few drops into the tub before getting in. After drying yourself thoroughly, pat a little under the arms and across your shoulders to discourage excessive perspiration.

Try Making Ice Cream

By JUDITH WILSON

What is your favorite dessert? Right now your answer will probably be ice cream or one of the close relatives like a fruit sherbet or refrigerator cake or pudding.

You can make it yourself—using some of the ready prepared ice cream powders or canned mixtures that take only a jiffy to combine with milk or fruit juice and turn into your refrigerator tray. Or you can follow one of the favorite old-fashioned recipes calling for milk, lots of eggs, cream, sugar and flavoring that you freeze to velvety smoothness in an old-fashioned freezer.

Ice cream, made in scientifically regulated modern plants, is available for you at your nearest grocery store on a moment's notice. Use it plain, with a sauce or combined with fruit and cake to make attractive and delicious desserts.

Here is one suggestion:
Ice Cream Puffs
Make cream puffs, but cool and fill with chocolate ice cream. Serve with a chocolate-banana sauce made as follows: Melt 1 square of unsweetened chocolate in a sauce-pan over hot water, add 1 tablespoon butter and when melted add 1 cup sugar and 2 tablespoons corn syrup. Boil five minutes or until the right consistency. Cool and add a few grains salt and vanilla to flavor. Add 1 ripe banana that has been crushed. Beat well and serve either hot or cold.

HEAR LILY PONS AT THE BOWL

The lovely voice of Lily Pons drew a number of Santa Anans to Hollywood bowl last night to hear her as guest soloist for the evening.

Making up one party here were Mrs. Van Drimlen, Mrs. E. T. McFadden, Mrs. Nelson Vise, Mrs. Ella Faupel, Bruce Buell, and the Misses Dorothy Graydon, Helis Gibbs, Virginia Pritchard, Doris Lorraine Faupel, Janet and Barbara McFadden, Margaret Davies, and Marjorie Randall.

PHILANTHROPIC SECTION
Philanthropic section of the Woman's club of Santa Ana will hold an all-day meeting Tuesday in the home of Mrs. E. O. Ahern, Tustin, with a covered dish luncheon at noon.

KOOL KOOKERY
Dedicated to helping Santa Anans arrange cooling meals with a minimum effort and cooking, this column will present daily a recipe appropriate for hot-weather menus.

Mrs. Glen Lyman learned to spice rice with pineapple and brown sugar when she asked the cook at a Glacier national park, Chalet how he made the delicious dish just served.

When she wanted to serve rice with her meat course at luncheon club Thursday, she boiled a half pound of rice, then ran cold water through it to make it fluffy, and drained it.

A small can of crushed pineapple, juice and all, and a half cup of brown sugar were mixed with the salted rice, just enough water added to prevent scorching, and the concoction went into the oven to get thoroughly hot before serving.

Grace Ford of Tulsa, Okla., a dancing teacher, chaperoned a contest winner to Hollywood—and won a film contract for herself.

Chapter 1: Rev. Charles E. Coughlin offers to bet $25,000 at 3 to 2 that Third Party Lemke will lead Landon in the November election.

Chapter 2: Frederick L. Jenckes publicly guarantees to cover the bet.

Chapter 3: Father Coughlin points out that his original wager was on which candidate would poll more votes in "Rhode Island."

Chapter 4: Mr. Jenckes says he'll even take on the limited wager.

Bluffer No. 2: "Yes."

Bluffer No. 1: "I was only fooling."

Bluffer No. 2: "I wasn't."

Moral: Be careful about your political bets. Don't forget it's a "put up or shut up" game the same as all wagers. Someone may take you up and take you for a ride. One can't always fall back on Rhode Island as easy as Father Coughlin did—and even that doesn't always work.

Double Jeopardy Defense Denied

If a man is charged with one crime, the case dismissed, and then he is charged with a lesser offense, he has been twice in jeopardy of life or property.

Justice Kenneth Morrison ruled to the contrary yesterday afternoon in refusing to dismiss misdemeanor drunk driving charges against Sylvester Vasquez, who originally was charged with felony drunk driving as a result of an accident in which two small boys were thrown from a bicycle and injured.

The motion was made by Robert Crowley, defense attorney, who contended the new charges involved "double jeopardy."

Vasquez will go to trial Aug. 18.

Explosive Query Starts Inquiry

"Can you tell me the names of some companies who transport nitroglycerin?"

The request to Los Angeles sheriff's officers set them on edge yesterday. They remember all sorts of scary things about bombs, and figured a nefarious plot was under way.

So they turned the name of the questioner, Paul Whipp, Garden Grove, over to sheriff's officers here. They talked to Whipp, a bit cautiously, and found he was just looking for a job as truck driver.

Los Angeles, they reported, felt much better after the investigation.

SEEK TITLE
Newport Beach and the American Legion post of that city today brought another of a series of quiet title actions in the superior court to clear property in that city. Leta Pauline Chapman was named as defendant claiming some right to the property.

Townsend Clubs
Howard P. Twitchell, commander of Elsinore V. F. W. post, will speak at meeting of club No. 2 at 7:30 p. m. Monday in Townsend hall, 509 West Fourth street. He will talk on the Townsend plan from the veteran's standpoint.

Club No. 10 will hold a business meeting at 7:30 p. m. Monday in the Free Methodist church, Fruit and Minter streets. All members are asked to attend.

BICYCLER DRUNK DRIVER? Officers Pore Over Law Books

A man on a bicycle evidently isn't a driver, so if he appears drunk he isn't a drunk driver. Sheriff's officers decided that last night after a good look through the law books, and finally charged Maitland Smith, 37, Placentia oil worker, with intoxication.

They answered a frantic call from Newport road last night, and said they found Smith, weaving from side to side, riding his bicycle down the road, worrying drivers no end.

They booked him at the county jail on a charge of intoxication on a county road.

They impounded the bicycle, too.

Benedicto Gomez of El Modena, who recently underwent a tonsil operation, has recovered, it was announced today.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Safley of 1541 East Fourth street were among Santa Anans attending the Iowa picnic today at Bixby park in Long Beach.

Dr. Stella K. Davis of 2205 Greenleaf has as her house guests this summer Mr. and Mrs. Pat Bowman and daughter, Barbara Ann, of Tulsa, Okla.

Dr. H. J. Howard and Mrs. Howard, Mrs. L. J. Owens, Mrs. Maurice S. Enderle, Claude Owens and Kathleen Cox attended the Hollywood bowl concert Friday night, hearing Lily Pons at guest artist.

Mrs. Rowland P. Yeagle of 2318 Bonnie Brae is spending the summer at Laguna Beach, Dr. Yeagle joining her there for week-ends.

James Warren of Ione, son of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Warren of that city, is spending the week-end in Santa Ana with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Warren of 814 North Parton, prior to going to Los Angeles, where he has registered for the coming semester at U. C. L. A. He will go out for fall football practice before the opening of school.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hoffman of McFadden street and Mr. and Mrs. James W. Dickson of 334 Harwood street have just returned from a week's vacation in Yosemite park.

Death Lawsuit To Be Answered

Rudolph H. Meyer, Buena Park rancher, must answer in 10 days the $15,000 damage action brought against him by Felix Lomeli over the death of the latter's nine-year-old daughter, Sara. Superior Judge James L. Allen ruled yesterday.

Judge Allen overruled a demurrer interposed by Meyer's attorney, Thomas L. McFadden. Lomeli's suit alleges that Meyer, driving while intoxicated, struck the child while she was on the road between Fullerton and Buena Park on June 21.

The legal owner is Clyde Willett, San Diego, who called for the car when sheriff's officers informed him that the woman who accompanied Bausell here had fled, leaving the automobile parked near the courthouse.

WALLACE WINS
Lew Wallace, Newport Beach, yesterday won a quiet title to a piece of property in that city when Judge James L. Allen granted him judgment in a quiet title action brought against Sarah A. Shafer.

FORECLOSES MORTGAGE
Mary Elizabeth Smith yesterday was authorized to foreclose a mortgage against the estate of Frank J. Bastian, in an order signed by Superior Judge James L. Allen. She was awarded $2082.79.

MAKE SETTLEMENT
Arnold A. Wilkens yesterday asked the superior court to approve a $102 settlement of claims of his 2-year-old son, Arnold, Jr., against Rhea House. According to the complaint the lad suffered a broken leg in an accident June 12.

L. A. MAN JAILED
Charged with stealing property in Fullerton, Albert Burghart, Los Angeles, was brought from the Los Angeles jail to Fullerton justice court yesterday by sheriff's officers, and released pending trial.

GOES TO EL CENTRO
Deputy Sheriff A. W. Fullerton was in El Centro today, planning to return tonight with Harry Williams, 45, wanted on a bad check charge by Brea police officers. Williams was arrested yesterday by El Centro officers.

TO SERVE TIME
To serve two months and 17 days on parole violation charges, Arthur Harris, 36, Los Angeles, accountant, was brought to the county jail last night by United States marshals.

DRUNK DRIVING CHARGE
William B. Martin, 52, Anaheim, bottling company manager, was booked at the county jail today by Orange police on a drunk driving charge.

This is my problem and the problem, I am sure, of many young married women who also read your column. My husband is working steady, but his wages are so small that we barely get by.

For a long time I have considered doing something to help out, but at the birth of my first child some months ago, I had to give up the idea.

However, now I feel that I must do something that would bring in a little money each month but would allow me to stay at home.

There must be women among your readers who have created jobs for themselves at home which bring in enough to pay a few of the household bills which so relentlessly pile up.

I studied stenography in high school, and I am an accurate typist. I've considered soliciting for typing work, but I don't want to go to the expense of getting a typewriter until I am sure I can make something at it.

I would like to have some of your readers write in and tell me of some of the paying jobs they have created for themselves at home, and I hope through your readers' suggestion that others will be as well as myself will get some ideas.

Thank you.
MRS. STAY-AT-HOME JOE HUNTER.

This seems to be an age of specialists, and one where originality brings dividends. Too many successful businesses have originated in a kitchen or living room.

For instance, a woman can make jelly or jam or marmalade, a certain kind of pie or cake or cookies that taste a bit different may build up a neighborhood demand for them and the first thing she knows, the fame of her product reaches beyond the neighborhood.

One woman I know developed an original idea for crocheted holders. She gave some to her friends for Christmas and they were so popular and so many of their friends wanted some that she realized more than pin money from her idea.

If you have a hobby of some sort, try developing it and then see if you can market it. I am sure other wives who are solving this problem will gladly give you some pointers and we shall be happy to print their suggestions here.

STRIKE ENDS IN PRIZES OFFERED LOS ANGELES IN PET SHOW

LOS ANGELES (AP)—An agreement providing a "closed shop" in the women's apparel manufacturing industry here and pay increases for the lower wage workers, effective Nov. 1, ended a strike of nearly 3000 garment factory employees yesterday, union headquarters announced.

The strike started Wednesday at the call of officials of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union.

Spokesmen for factory owners said they were forced by circumstances to make "temporary concessions" but said the strikers had not won a complete victory.

Everything from dog collars to roller skates, cake and wrist watches is included in the list of prizes being offered by Santa Ana and Garden Grove merchants for winners in the city-wide pet show, to be held at 2 p. m. Aug. 12 in the Santa Ana Municipal bowl.

Sponsored by playground supervisors under the WPA recreation project, the show is open to pets of all children who have attended the playgrounds this summer.

John Jones and his harmonica students are to entertain the youngsters, Norman Paul, unit supervisor, announced. Jones and R. R. Russick will serve as judges. Prizes will be given for chickens, parrots, canaries, bantams, ducks, turkeys, pigeons, cats and dogs entered in the show. Pets may be entered by registering with any playground supervisor or by bringing the animals or birds to the bowl at 2 p. m. Wednesday.

Stay-at-Home Wife Seeks Ways to Swell Family Income, Remain With Baby

By MARY STODDARD
A young married woman brings to us a problem which is a bit different, but her idea is constructive.

Her husband's salary is small and she does not wish to go out-side of her home to seek an additional income.

Isn't there something she can do at home to help out with the expenses? Aren't there other married women who would also be interested in this way of giving friends a hand?

Are there wives who perhaps are solving the problem of finances in this manner? If so, wouldn't they be happy to tell other wives how to go about it?

Here is the wife's letter and we hope some of our readers will have some constructive ideas for her:

Dear Miss Stoddard: I have been a reader of your columns for some time, but I never have had any reason to write for help and advice until recently.

This is my problem and the problem, I am sure, of many young married women who also read your column. My husband is working steady, but his wages are so small that we barely get by.

For a long time I have considered doing something to help out, but at the birth of my first child some months ago, I had to give up the idea.

Florida Allowed To Color Fruit

Florida can go ahead and color its citrus fruit for another year. But it has assured Secretary of Agriculture Wallace it will withhold from market all oranges which fall below the department's standard of maturity. In other words it has promised not to try to use the color process to compensate inferior fruit.

The Associated Press announced that Secretary Wallace has postponed for one year the effective date of his order banning use of coal tar dye for artificial coloring of citrus fruits. The order was to have become effective Sept. 1.

The department's previous order was based on the contention that the dye process was used to conceal inferiority.

Political Mass Meeting Today

Sponsored by the committee for United Political Action, a mass meeting was slated for 4 o'clock today in Birch park, to discuss qualifications of candidates in the Nineteenth district.

Maxwell Burke will be among leading speakers. N. E. West, Bryant Bostick and others sponsored by the committee have been invited to attend.

AWARD L. A. JAIL JOB
WASHINGTON (AP)—The treasury department announced today award of an $897,000 contract for construction of a federal jail in Los Angeles, to Robert E. McKee, Los Angeles.

MURDER TONIGHT
BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

early risings and the long hours in the open which his job demanded. Six feet exactly he stood in his stocking feet, his shirt open at the throat, his well-cut corduroy breeches showing off his strong legs. He crossed the unlighted kitchen and lifted the latch of the back door.

"That you Alice?" he asked. "Nice fool you'd have looked if it wasn't," she said. "You ought to be more careful with your names, Harry."

Small laughed. "Oh hell, you're as bad as that husband of yours." He stood looking at her for a moment in admiration, a shaft of light from the front room fell on her like the limelight of a theater. She was panting a little and her cheeks were flushed. He caught his breath sharply. "My God," he said, "you look a picture."

She laughed again. "Like me, Harry?"

"I might have meant a picture of misery. You've hurried haven't you in a year?"

"I'm at my sister's."

"And where does she think you are?"

"On the way home—I can't stay long Harry."

She upturned her face. "You haven't kissed me yet, Harry."

"Plenty of time."

"I don't know—we might all be dead in a year."

"You say some funny things, me dear—where, how's that?"

Alice White took her full lips away from the man's reluctantly. Her eyes were shut, she was breathing quickly.

"Come into the other room and sit in front of the fire."

"All right—but I really mustn't stay long Harry. You know what Jimmy is."

"Scared?" After a few moments.

"Put your arm around me—not a bit."

"Strong man, aren't you?"

"Strong enough for my darling, Harry. Small said, his lips pressed against the soft white neck."

Small disentangled himself from the woman's arms and lit a cigarette.

"What about old Burdett," he asked, anything new?"

"No. Jimmy seems pretty busy about it."

"He ought to have caught the chap red-handed, whoever it was, that would have been one up for him."

"He was out this way that evening, after the poachers."

"Well, he might as well have been elsewhere. What's this Inspector chap like?"

"A bit funny, but quite nice, a proper gentleman."

"I suppose you'll be after him next."

"I don't go after people."

Small laughed and slid his arm round her again.

"I must go soon, Harry; he knows I never stay very late at my sister's."

"Pretty fond of you, isn't he?"

"He absolutely adores me. I can give him hell if I want to by getting in a temper and not letting him near me."

VIOLINISTS ON ABBEY HOUR

The Musical Memory Hour program to be given at Melrose Abbey Sunday afternoon will feature Mrs. Charles Brisco, contralto, and a violin ensemble from the Joseph Bistline violin studios of Santa Ana. Miss Charlotte Hollister will act as accompanist on the Cathedral organ.

Mrs. Brisco is soloist at the First Church of Christ Scientist, Orange, and is well known in Santa Ana musical circles. "Angels Serenade" (Braga), will be sung by Mrs. Brisco with Joseph Bistline playing the violin obbligato.

Selections chosen for the violin ensemble include "March from Athalia" (Mendelssohn); "Italian Song" (De Capua); "Coronation March" (Myerbeer); and "Andantino" (Lemare). The ensemble is composed of Helen Brown, June Bistline, Margy Johnson, Mildred Lockett, Mildred Fromm, Eleanor Hedley and Dorothy Eulack.

Violin solos will be rendered by Margy Johnson playing "Meditation" (Morrison), and "Cavatina" (Raff) by Helen Brown.

Miss Hollister will play three selections on the organ, "Grand Chorus" (Dubois); "Barcarolle" (Hofmann); and "Meditation" from "Thais" (Massenet).

Parents are welcome to bring the young folks who are interested in music, especially those studying the violin.

Musical Memory Hour programs begin at 3 o'clock and are open to the public.

Story of the Bible Told in Pictures

David kills Goliath.—The armies of the Philistines were gathered together, and Saul and his men prepared to battle against them. The two armies were camped opposite one another. "And there went out a champion out of the camp of the Philistines, named Goliath, of Gath, whose height was six cubits and a span.—I Sam. 17:4. "And he stood and cried unto the armies of Israel, 'Choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me. If he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants; but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants and serve us.'—I Sam. 17:8-9. David accepted the challenge of Goliath. "And David put his hand in his bag, and took thence a stone, and slung it, and smote the Philistine in his forehead, that the stone sunk into his forehead; and he fell upon his face to the earth."—I Sam. 17:49. This illustration by Merian was engraved in 1625.

ANTI-SUICIDE GROUP FORMS

OAKLAND. (AP)—Robert Rehkugel, who said he was a retired Methodist minister, identified himself today as the founder of the Suicide Prevention Society of America.

The title of the organization was recorded with the secretary of state in Sacramento.

Rehkugel said formation of the organization was motivated by a study of the suicide rate in the United States. He said there were 250,000 suicides in the country in the period from 1920 to 1934.

Rehkugel believes many of the suicides could have been prevented. "We intend to preach our anti-suicide message through the churches, over the radio, in the theater, on the lecture platform and in the newspapers," Rehkugel said. "We hope to have 'Suicide Prevention Sunday' observed in every state."

Rehkugel said plans also contemplate organization of a "Suicide prevention patrol." The patrol would be composed of young men and women whose duty would be to "seek and save" persons planning to perish by their own hand and restore them to their families and society.

The former clergyman said tentative plans also include the hope that homes may be established in various cities in which persons who have been frustrated in attempts to commit suicide might be enabled to "live and forget" and be restored to society as useful citizens.

United Brethren Plan Active Week

Activity will not be lacking next week at the United Brethren church, where the young people's Christian Endeavor society is planning a business and social meeting at 7:30 p. m. Thursday.

The Otterbein guild will meet Thursday evening at the home of Dorothy Gammell, 936 West Myrtle street, with Betty Hutton as leader.

With the Missionary society, the guild plans a picnic at Irvine park Thursday. The two groups will leave the church at 10 a. m. A beach party is scheduled for Friday afternoon for members of the intermediate Christian Endeavor society.

Jehovah Group in New Quarters

Unitarians Hear Challenge to Primitive Religion

With a sermon on "Confucianism: Religion Without Supernaturalism," the series of lecture-sermons at the Unitarian church on "The World's Great Religions" turns tomorrow from its consideration of the great primitive religions to the challenge of the past four weeks to primitive religions.

Under the head, "The Challenge to Primitive Religion," Confucianism, Buddhism, Judaism and Mohammedanism will be discussed by the pastor, the Rev. Julia N. Budlong.

"Scholars in the field of comparative religions sometimes aver that the average American business man is not a Christian at all, but a Confucianist," says Miss Budlong.

"How do they justify this contention? What are the distinguishing marks of a Confucianist? Of a Christian? Is it possible that America will 'go Confucian' before the Orient is converted to Christianity? Would that mean an end to progress? Such are the questions that will lie behind the discussion of the faith of 300,000,000 of our western neighbors."

Music for the service will incorporate tunes from the Orient, as the Elwood Bear string ensemble plays Creighton's "Lotus Leaves"; Bohm's "Sarabande"; and Saint-Saens' "Romance" from "Samson and Delilah." Other numbers will be Beethoven's "Andante Cantabile"; "Intermezzo Pizzicato," by Neury; and "Largo" from the "New World Symphony."

Readings and meditations for the service will be taken from the writings of the Chinese philosopher, Confucius.

The Wednesday evening book-review will be given by the minister. She has selected "Sweden, The Middle Way," by Marquis W. Childs, the book which is directing the attention of the United States to the northern countries and their solution of vexing economic readjustments under a democratic government. The review program, open to the public without charge, opens at 8 p. m. with a piano solo by Billy Beman.

When James brought his family here, in 1873, he bought the Cozad tract. The last brother to come to California was Archie. He came in 1875.

The growth and expansion of Santa Ana has been the constant aim of the McFaddens.

In about 1868 James McFadden bought the section of land where the Southern California sugar factory now stands. There were about 4000 acres extending from the San Joaquin line south to Delhi and taking in most of the present site of Greenville.

With his brothers, Robert and John, a successful lumber business was conducted. They unloaded their lumber from ships at the old Newport landing. They sold their lumber locally and as far away as San Bernardino.

The name McFadden is quite popular in Orange county today. The children and grandchildren of the McFadden brothers and the one sister, Agnes, have really carried the banner of their family well.

Archie McFadden was one of the organizers of the Orange County Mutual Insurance company.

Swimming Classes Will Continue

More swimming instruction for boys and girls at the Y. M. C. A. is promised for next week, according to Secretary D. H. Tibbals.

Who said today that the work in small groups during the past week has been very satisfactory and that the classes will be continued.

Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 9 a. m. there are lessons for boys, and at 9:30 a. m. for girls. These lessons are for young folks who can swim a little and who wish to improve themselves. A few additional learners can be taken into the classes next Monday if there are others desiring to take the work. The instruction is given by Harris Warren, who has been successful in teaching more than 100 young folks how to swim during the summer.

Clem, Burrow At Bourbon Meet

Stanley Clem and Curtis Burrow of Santa Ana, along with some 20 other Orange county Young Democrats, were to go to Long Beach today to take part in the annual Southern California conference of the Young Democrats of California. Clem is president of the Santa Ana club.

Guests of honor will include Sen. William G. McAdoo, California; Sen. Louis D. Schwelienbach, Washington; George Creel, and other prominent Democrats. The session will last until tomorrow noon. Clem and Ray LaFont, Anaheim president, have been named on the reception committee.

21 Americans Left in Kwangsi

NANKING. (AP)—Only 21 Americans, all men, are known to remain in Kwangsi province, currently the scene of sporadic armed protests against domination by China's central government.

All other United States citizens have been evacuated as a result of continued tension, the American embassy here was informed.

Salinas Minister To Preach Sunday

Guest minister at the United Presbyterian church, Sixth and Bush streets, tomorrow will be the Rev. A. W. Webster, Salinas. He will occupy the pulpit of the church, the Rev. A. W. Webster, Salinas, recently completed a trip in the East.

Women members of the Church of Christ will hold their regular Thursday meeting at the church. After a morning session of quilting and pot-luck luncheon at noon they will study Luke 11 and 12, at 1:30 p. m.

AKER UNION SERVICES SPEAKER

The Rev. C. M. Aker, pastor of the Spurgeon Memorial Methodist church, will be the main speaker at city-wide union services slated for 7:30 p. m. tomorrow in the First Congregational church, 619 North Main street.

Music will be furnished by the choir of the host church, in accordance with precedent set for the summer union services.

"The Only Thing God Requires of Us" will be the Rev. Mr. Aker's topic at morning service tomorrow in his own church. Mrs. Glen Mustion and Mrs. Elizabeth Hubbard are to sing a duet.

Stivers Returns Here for Sermon

Returning as guest pastor to the church from which he recently retired, the Rev. John T. Stivers will preach tomorrow at the Orange Avenue Christian church.

Since his retirement from the ministry, the Rev. Mr. Stivers and Mrs. Stivers have been living in Ontario.

To Tell Escape From Bandits

How he escaped from Chinese bandits to carry on his missionary work in the Orient will be recounted by the Rev. Ralph Phillips at the 7:30 p. m. service tomorrow in the Christian and Missionary Alliance church, Main and Bishop streets.

The average path of a tornado is about 30 miles long and 1000 feet wide.

Test for Trouble-Makers

IT'S A GREAT PRIVILEGE to live in America, to drive to work in the morning and home at night without meeting any rival political armies settling their disputes with airplane bombs, machine guns and other destructive weapons.

No use denying it, the masses aroused present a rather ticklish problem to the fellow who doesn't care about war.

Now take the United States, for instance. This country can gloat at Spain with its battles, and at France, which has some fairly sharp fighting.

That little incident of the Civil war? Oh, that's all forgotten.

But the point is: It shouldn't be forgotten.

People of one nation are pretty much alike, whether they go to baseball games or bull fights. Our national cemeteries bear evidence that the Civil war was a tragic affair. It was brewed right here in America by Americans.

There are with us today those point-seeking, advantage-wanting men and women who would recommend mass extermination to those opposing their wishes. Their will is strong. Their predecessors broke down giants like Lincoln.

The masses can be fanned to hatred in any nation, including America.

Killing the fellows you do not like seems to be a justifiable pastime under proper leadership. As a proper training, prior to joining any militant group, we recommend that the killer-to-be first kick in the sides of an active bee hive. If all this still seems fun, destruction, glory and a chance of becoming the king bee, do not let anyone stand in the way—start your own revolution.

But remember, bees are wise little bugs.

Politics vs. Human Welfare

PENNSYLVANIA legislators, after two weeks of heckling by several hundred unemployed who occupied the senate gallery, reluctantly have voted $45,000,000 for relief. The legislators wanted to follow New Jersey's lead and adjourn without making provisions for the jobless, but under the circumstances they thought better of it.

Here in the West, with our countless activities relating chiefly to the harvesting of bountiful crops, we can hardly imagine the conditions under which the unemployed residents of Pennsylvania's thickly populated industrial cities and mining centers exist.

Out here, in the spring, summer and fall, a man who is unemployed may possibly sustain himself and even his family by taking to the byways and trading his labor for food, at least.

In the industrial centers of the East, trained as men are to put full dependence on a factory or mine job and a Saturday night pay envelope, joblessness unmitigated by "relief" of one kind or another, may mean simply a restless, hungry, desperate trudging of concrete sidewalks and paved streets—with no hope in sight.

If the Pennsylvania legislature had gone through with its negative program, no doubt it would have handed a sharp political rebuke to the national administration which has sought to distribute food and jobs to those who need them. But it would have been placing partisan politics above human welfare. The legislators are lucky that they were brought to their senses in time.

It's a pretty dead presidential campaign when the boys can get worked up over whether or not Al Smith is going to make a speech against President Roosevelt.

Keeping Boys Out of Trouble

"YOU'LL never get ahead running around with no money in your pockets, drinking beer and wine, and going to see girls after midnight." Such was the good advice given by Superior Judge Allen to two 19-year-old boys convicted of rifling a telephone pay station to get money for a good time.

Judge Allen's warning should be studied not only by young men who foolishly want to sow their wild oats, but also by all fathers and mothers of boys.

It is quite likely that the parents of those two boys, or others responsible for their upbringing, are more to blame for the theft than the boys themselves. Juvenile delinquency research shows that usually it is the home, or the community, rather than the youngster that is at fault. The boy knows only what he has been taught. If his parents or the community won't teach him how to spend his time in useful or healthful work and recreation, he'll sometimes pick up mischievous and criminal habits elsewhere.

The best way to keep boys out of trouble is to give them something worthwhile to do. Parents can do it at home. Communities can do it at supervised playgrounds and manual training shops.

Bright Moment in Life

IN A CIVILIZATION where success is too often measured by the dollar or social position, it's an inspiration to see 60 men and women voluntarily rush to give their blood for a transfusion to save the life of a dying baby. That happened this week in Orange county, following a broadcast for help over station KVOE.

Banker and bum, mistress and maid jostled elbows in the rush to help 2-year-old Daniel Laurent at St. Joseph's hospital. And the only reward was the inner pleasure of a generous act.

Somehow incidents like this do a lot to strengthen our faith in the underlying goodness of all people.

Whimsies of O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

My fancy is going to chute the chutes today in a splash of trivia. A release from columnar concentration and a skid into the art or willy-nilly. It's too hot for assembling. So here I am in slacks, for, ho, at the typewriter, ready to tap out whatever comes pop-pop-popping along.

I often grow bug-eyed wondering where the hell a whole of an idea. Certainly it doesn't come from that pulpy mess known as brain. The brain as a receiving set a la radio is plausible enough. But what bewilders is the why of the inexhaustible storehouse of intelligence back of it all. Pathom that and you're hep to Life.

I used to have a psychiatrist friend who dove—or is it dived?—into the mysteries of thought usually empty-handed. Everyone, he says, has looked into a mirror to query: "Who am I?" It is a grisly diversion of the neurasthenic. Toyed with, it can drive one dotty.

This is getting out into pathological waters. A treatise for the medical tracts. I'm padding hurriedly back to more familiar shores. Such as: A telephone girl told our cook he happiest voice she ever heard was Max Schmeling after the big fight. Telling his wife in Berlin: "I won, sweetheart!"

The Broadway columnists waste much energy in mutual sneering. Journalism used to have some hefty fist-tossers. E. Jesse Conway, a crack city editor out our way, kept a supply of black eye patches in his desk drawer. Chicago was known for its rough and tumble reporters. Also San Francisco and Minneapolis. Bill Corum, I believe, has made the greatest strides in descriptive writing of the period. He is one of the banner six American reporters. Ray Long was first to notice him brightening routine stuff on The Times and sent him to Brisbane. Boonville, Mo., hatched him.

For 19 years I've not eaten lunch. A combination of economy and late breakfasting. Result: Missing much of the outlet for discussion. All the robust stories are swapped across luncheon tables. At dinner somehow people are inclined to gossip, sometimes venomously. George M. Cohan spent much of his time in London with Joe Coyne, a veteran American character there. And known as the most indefatigable walker in the City. Rivaling our own Dr. John Finley. I could walk indefinitely to that tune "The Whistler and His Dog."

Baseball clubs have such awkward titles. The Reds, the White Sox, The Yankees, etc. Most lyrical was the Baltimore Orioles. A letter today: "I was terribly, terribly wrong. Wrong from start to finish." How hard for many of us to make such a confession. I'm a Clem McCarthy fan but I have a feeling I'd like to file his voice. Also Fred Allen's. I believe the most hospitable area in America is the Blue Grass section of Kentucky, the home of the mint julep, fine horses and beautiful women. People there devote much time to the almost vanished art of being gracious. Corey Ford is banging out grand fiction.

A hat check pirate confesses he made $20 a week snipping labels of reputable tailors from wraps left in his care and selling them to shoddy second-hand dealers. Utopia will include free hat checking without embarrassment. One wonders who is richest of the crooners. Some say Rudy Vallee and others Bing Crosby. Anyway Crosby wangles more out of life. He dabbles in expensive race horses. Vallee appears to care about nothing save work. A marvel of physical stamina, often working 18 hours a day. Probably lives on applause. The poorest lives in the world are radio announcers giving over the mike to each other. Sometimes I wish they would rough it up. Five girls at a department store glove counter—where they are invariably stunned—told my wife Robert Taylor was away out front as the nation's No. 1 Heart Flutterer.

When a pulp magazine writer lands in the Grade A magazines, he calls it "hitting the slicks."

I like the story—Dean Cornwell's, I think—of the city folk who suspected the eggs at the farm house where they were summering. It developed they were so used to cold storage hen fruit they didn't know the real thing. Someone sends me a postcard of Wilton Lackey's monument. It bears his name—nothing more. An actor to the finish—never revealing age. I never miss Meredith Wilson's orchestra broadcasts. Major New York mystery: Why a cup of coffee upon inclusion of two lumps of ice increases 50 per cent in value. When I studied hypnotism by mail—Learn to Conquer. The Sverglund School of the Evil Eye, Drawer 10, Dept. J, Eastport, Pa.—I had my hair cut pompadour. And practiced writing "Prof." before my name.

The Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

(Editor's Note: Here is another of the penetrating Merry-Go-Round personality sketches that have been made a weekly feature of the column.)

WASHINGTON.—Not so very many people around Topeka had heard much of Theo Cobb until she became Mrs. Alf Landon. She was the only child of conservative, well-to-do parents, rather inclined to stay at home and keep their company.

Folks saw her frequently at the older sort of parties, such as sewing circles and missionary societies. Sometimes she attended a dance, but seemed to spend more time talking to the older people on the sidelines than she did dancing.

In fact, you got the impression that Theo Cobb was the old-fashioned type who kept on putting her hair up in curl-papers after the other girls had gone in for permanents, the type who kept on with music lessons long after the other girls had discarded anything requiring real concentration, for radio and the phonograph.

It was at about this stage that Theo met Alf Landon. She was then 31, just on the verge of becoming a spinster. Alf was 42, a widower with a daughter 13 years old. His first wife, Margaret Fleming, of Oil City, Pa., had died shortly after the birth of Peggy Anne.

ECONOMIZER

Landon was a coming young man in Kansas politics at that time campaign manager for Clyde Reed, whom he helped elect governor of Kansas, defeating John M. Hamilton, his present campaign manager, for the Republican nomination.

Hamilton at that time was the pupil and heir of Dave Mulvane, famous political boss of Kansas, and Theo Cobb's father was president of the National bank of Topeka, generally known as the "Dave Mulvane bank." Theo, however, accompanied Alf on one or two short auto trips while he was campaigning against Hamilton, and shortly after the campaign, married him.

When they were married, some of the neighbors said: "Well, Alf's gone and married himself a rich girl again." (Theo's father left about $200,000 to her and her mother when he died. Landon's personal fortune is estimated at about $300,000.) But as wife of the governor of Kansas, Mrs. Landon turned out to be a more rigid economist than her husband.

She asked the Kansas legislature to cut the annual appropriation for the governor's mansion from $6,000 to $4,200, and has been careful to consult the budget officer to make sure that certain things she needed—improvements to the house, garden, extra servants, etc.—came within authorized limits.

FISHERWOMAN

As a housewife, Mrs. Landon is equal to any occasion. At the Estes Park ranch this summer, she once found herself with no meat in the house and some unexpected guests arriving. So she sent the colored cook out to fish. He had no luck, nor did some of the men on the ranch.

"Finally," says Mrs. Landon, "I decided to try my luck, and in a few minutes had two nice rainbow trout for our dinner."

Mrs. Landon has done all the entertaining required of a governor's wife, but without splurging. She has given many teas and small dinners, with an occasional large reception. These are held in the ugly, gabled and cupola-ed mansion which Kansas supplies its governors, with furniture that Henry Mencken describes as "early Bismarck."

Mrs. Landon is a gracious hostess, has the knack of making her guests feel at home, and frequently plays the harp or piano for them. Before she married, she was a meticulous student of both instruments, practicing one hour before her teacher arrived and one hour afterward. As her teacher, Caroline Whitteley, grew old, Theo also spent considerable time driving her to her various appointments around Topeka.

NANCY JO

Mrs. Landon entertains the residents of Topeka's old ladies' home once a year at tea, and when Nancy Josephine, aged 4, celebrates her birthday, the children from the city orphanage are invited.

Nancy Jo was born in 1932, the same year that Alf won the Republican nomination and defeated Governor Woodring, who was running for re-election. That also was the year when Roosevelt was swept into the White House, and Landon became the only Republican governor west of the Hudson river.

Theo Cobb has bloomed as a wife and mother, and the neighbors in Topeka say they never would recognize the girl who used to stay at home with her mother and father. Theo and her mother still are very close, although her mother lives in a separate house—the house, incidentally, where Mrs. Landon keeps her famous collection of old glass.

PRIZE GLASS

The prize feature of this collection is the lustro-vase, on which the rarest exhibit is a pitcher given Theo by Alf shortly after their marriage. They were motoring. The car developed engine trouble and Alf went into a house to telephone. He came out with the lustro-vase pitcher, which he had seen in a cupboard and bought for his bride.

Mrs. Landon has brown, wavy hair, just beginning to be faintly streaked with grey. Her pictures give the impression that she is a large woman, but actually she is under average height and not at all portly. The dimple in her right cheek deepens when she smiles, and some say it is the dimple which first captivated Alf Landon.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

There is considerable speculation on what Mrs. Landon will serve in the White House if her husband is elected. Alf used to take a drink now and then, but now nothing stronger than soda pop is served in the governor's mansion. Mrs. Landon traveled occasionally with her parents, but usually in the middle west. She has not been abroad. She attended Washburn college (900 students) in Topeka, is now on the board of trustees. Mrs. Landon's favorite recreation is horseback riding, though she has been so busy raising children she has had no time for it recently. She plays neither golf nor tennis. Sometimes she and Alf go to the movies, but keep clear of the main aisle. The Landons attend the Methodist church regularly.

BALANCING BUDGET

To the Editor: "I have been disgusted with this constant talk about balancing the budget. How could anybody have balanced it?" Thus that fine U. S. senator from Michigan, James S. Couzens, a Republican seeking re-election. The intelligent millions of this country feel that same disgust, senator. Balancing the budget is not a political issue. Practically all of us want the budget balanced, just as we want to get to a satisfactory heaven, but the question is not what is wanted but how to get it.

"How" is one of the mightiest words of the human language. It is involved all human aspirations and endeavors. In the present period, the great issue is how? Balance the budget? Surely, but how? Retrenchment in government outlay? Yes, but how? Uplift of farmers and others at hard labor? It must be that the whole people can thrive, but how? Full restoration of confidence, control of the greed of privileged, concentrated capital and the placing of burdens upon those best able to carry them? Assuredly prime desirable, but how to attain them?

Terrifically serious will be the condition of free America, if its intelligence and patriotism are satisfied with platform planks, fatuous promises and naked statements of what's wanted, so ridden is the country with foolish elements out to risk anything to get what they, in particular, want.

The country must demand of the Landon-Knox party definite answer of How? No ducking, dodging, passing of the buck. No mess of merely platitudinous promises, views with alarm and stable statements of what is desirable will do, if the plans that have already undoubtedly started the country on the road to normal prosperity are to be wiped out and a new start with different methods made, what and how? If doing business today, the Sphinx would put that question, "How?"

At Messrs. Landon and Knox, first thing.

R. F. PAINE.

Knute Hillestad, operator of the Grand Central pharmacy for a number of years, confessed today that the printing art was not an unknown experience. When the composition on a newspaper was via the movable type and hand and stick, Knute was going some. He put 'em in and threw 'em back. On his way out of an apprenticeship to the goal of journeymen he was persuaded by a pioneer of the Fourth Estate to go with him to establish a new paper in South Dakota, the picture having been illuminated with unlimited possibilities. Young Hillestad yielded to the persuasive influence of the promoter. When they arrived at the alleged attractive location, after buying equipment from the Western Newspaper Union, they were ahead of the town. In fact there wasn't any. So the newspaper was printed before the town started. Finally through the place, gave the enterprising newspaper men a corner lot, and the constituency arrived later. When you see the name of Wagner on the South Dakota map you will know that's where Hillestad got an early newspaper experience which he hasn't forgotten.

One Man's Opinion

EDITOR'S NOTE—Here is an informative, analytical daily feature on current topics. The opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily the same as those held by The Journal.

Professional Politicians Are Uncomfortable

PROMISES, and more promises, against the whole vile brood of leeches, ticks and tapeworms which glut themselves at the public trough. Such parasites thrive best in dark places where the sunlight of publicity does not scorch them. When dragged forth into daylight they squirm and flounder in helplessness.

The people are much better informed on public affairs than ever before. Better communication has had a profound educative effect. Discussion of public problems has been stimulated in every household by the radio, presentation of facts, an analysis of what's going on in the world. And this is where the politician loses out. He never has had much grasp on social and economic problems. His only purpose was to get and not to give.

One is impressed with the growing distrust and hostility which the people have for professional politicians. It is a most hopeful trend of the times. When enough people get mad enough and hump their backs high enough the riders will slide from the saddles. When public officials are selected on the basis of intelligence, honesty, courage and a work there will be a decided uplift in the tone of public service.

Several trends in recent years make it more difficult for the politician to fool the people. For one thing, the people know him better. Publicity is a powerful weapon of public service.

Skinny Skribbles

Around and About Town

With C. F. SKIRVIN

Information isn't so bad unless you get too much of it. And then there is another objection, if you are located so you can't get away from it. Yesterday the day was ruined for Patrolman "Brick" Grouard. It started out with "it hot enough for you," and continued far into the afternoon. When I talked to him there were indications that a charge of homicide might be filed against him any moment. I agreed, if he could get me on a jury, to stand out for a justifiable verdict, when alone came a flock of "it hot enough for you's" and the fight started all over again. This conversation about the weather has its appropriate features, but there comes a time when you get darned tired of its length and frequency.

Some fellow asked me what is a meter. Someone must have asked Webster the same question because he records it as the unit length in the decimal system—39.37 inches. If that isn't what he wants to know he can ask the gas man. He won't like that, either.

Couldn't get any news about Iowa today. All the folk over to Long Beach asking each other if they remembered away back when I was expecting to see an Iowa license plate almost any minute. It has happened. If the tall corn song is a part of the day's proceedings it will either show state loyalty or a lack of information. The news I get is to the effect that if there is any corn it isn't tall, and most of the information is to the effect that there isn't any corn.

Frank Orr starts out with Photographer LeDreux to take him to Laguna Beach, and when I ask him not to bring him back that night, I started an argument. I seem to have an uncanny way of not getting along with people.

I've been invited to a picnic. I'm going, but I am not going to play baseball. I remember the day after as well as the morning after. So, isn't it? I don't like to be reminded that they are not as young as they used to be. I don't talk to me. I admit it. I do get a thrill out of seeing the other fellow try and make his associates believe that he is as young as he used to be, when I know he isn't, and I also know they will find it out the next morning. But I like a picnic and what goes with it. All you need to know is not to go too far.

"Brink" Brinkerhoff extends me an invitation to cross the street in front of his car at an intersection, and I refuse. As if I didn't know that fellow was only waiting for the chance to run over me.

Mammie Cohen wants to make me some money, and I want him to, but I've got to have some money to start with. Now don't rush. I'll wait for you. You better let me have your money and try to make you some with Mammie's help, than slip it into a machine and lose it. You see with me as good as you can do the way you are using your money.

Prompted by a humane impulse, friend friend decides to install a bird bath in the back yard. During this hot weather that was a kindly thought and laudable purpose. The birds showed their gratitude by eating the figs. Now the lady hails between two opinions. Whether to remove the bath or cut down the old fig tree.

Height of Civilization Is Far From Attained!

Are We Men Or Beasts? Strange Impulses Draw Us Together To Conquer Our Common Enemies, Then Prompt Us To Fight Among Ourselves

ARE you man or beast? Your business reactions, your aspirations and your habits will determine your status. Here you see a picture of the great Putnam's bronze, "Combat," showing a man fighting puma and cub! Right now the world echoes with the tumult of combat — and in so doing proves that civilization is little better than man of the cave days, when it was actually necessary to fight beasts of the forests in order to survive.

The height of civilization will be reached when man talks with man sanely, intelligently, reasonably, about the problems which are mutual and for the betterment of society at large. No longer having the beasts of forests and mountains to fight we turn upon each other!

Why? The great God gave man a mind superior to that of animals, but man, on the whole fails to respect the gift and, as pictured (right), takes his place with four-footed prowlers, defending himself by sheer physical strength when he should use his mind to reason.

That the world might be a finer place in which to live, sane ones have given us rules of culture. There is, for instance, Lillian Eichler's new book of Etiquette (Garden City Publishing Co.), wherein the author tells of the dawn and development of social life, as follows:

MAN woke to life in a strange and terrifying world. There were snakes of fire that zigzagged through the sky, and sudden crashes of thunder that rocked the earth. Great furry beasts stood tall as the trees, and the jungle hummed with many ominous voices. Even silent mountains came suddenly to life and coughed flame into the sky.

"Alone and frightened, man struggled through the first brief span of life. He saw danger lurking everywhere around him. The night sky winked at him with a million tiny eyes. The sun seemed a ball of fire that laughed at his efforts to reach it. His very shadow seemed a ghost-like enemy that stalked at his side.

"Cradled thus in a world of hostility, man knew fear. And so fear was the first instinct definitely to influence the habits of life.

"More than anything else, perhaps, man feared his own kind. He kept as much as possible out of the way of the strange, hairy creatures that, like himself, prowled the plains and jungles in search of food. Man was easy prey to man in those days, and food was often scarce. "It became one of the first habits of life to carry a crude club as a weapon. A pair of savages meet at the fringe of some forest. Both are hungry and both smell food. They growl, and hold their ground. They growl again, and raise their clubs. In a moment they are upon each other, wild as angered beasts, fighting simply because they fear and distrust each other.

"William J. Fielding, writing of our caveman heritage, says that before we are able to reason, before we are able to love, or hate, or comprehend, we are able to be afraid. You have probably noticed that the first emotions of a child are fear and surprise.

"And so it was with man in the dawn of life. He felt long before he reasoned. He feared whatever he could not comprehend. For one long age he lived a life within himself, searching for food when he was hungry, finding a sleeping place when he was tired, hiding in caves and crevices when the earth was rocked by storms.

"Cautious and alone, he lived each little life from dawn to dark — an infant in a world already old.

"Fear, then, bred in man an instinctive avoidance of his fellows.

"But let us turn a page or two in the book of life. Man is beginning to reason. The tiny shaft of light that is to separate mankind forever from the lower animals is gradually widening, penetrating even to this remote age, and bringing to man, as he struggles on the threshold of life, a beam of understanding.

"We watch again as two savage men of this later age meet at the fringe of the forest. Both are well fed; neither is particularly frightened. They eye each other carefully for a moment, make a wide circuit, and disappear in opposite directions.

OR perhaps they come upon a great beast of the jungle, both at the same time. Instantly and without a murmur they fall upon it and between them kill it with little trouble. Sudden impulse drew them together, made them partners for the moment.

"And reason spoke within them. Two could kill a beast more quickly and with less trouble than one. Why not be friends instead of enemies?

"This occurred not to one man, but to many men in widely separated places. It became a habit of life, when one savage fellow met another with whom he wished to be friendly, to extend the bare right hand—the weapon hand—as a sign of friendliness. The other fellow would understand, for symbolism is the simplest and most universal language of mankind. Instead of fighting, they would join forces; they would hunt together, perhaps live together. From this first crude symbol of friendliness evolved the handshake, which is even today an instinctive expression of welcome.

"The impulse that drew man to man in time of mutual danger was the first thread in the pattern of social relationship. It satisfied a hunger that earth alone could not satisfy. Man looked at man, and a racial sympathy was born. He saw hair like his own hair, teeth like his own teeth, a body like his own body. And he wanted to share with this creature like himself the fears and joys and wonders of his daily life. He wanted the other fellow to know of his great strength. He wanted to show him the bear he had killed in the jungle, the woman he had dragged to his cave. So, far back in the dawn of human life, man moved closer to man. A slumbering social instinct was awakened.

"Man gradually became accustomed to the world in which he found himself. He began to explain the rain and thunder to his own satisfaction. Shadows that trembled on the ground were simply 'dark selves' that came and went as they pleased. The fire-spitting mountains were angry gods to be propitiated. The sun was just a ball of fire that remained up and out of the way as long as one did not bother it. Fear slowly gave way to reason.

AND man acquired a new ease. He made for himself a clever flint and wandered the world like a conqueror. In his new ease he paused for a moment to watch an elderly mother jackal play with her cubs. He grinned at a pair of brown bears rolling gleefully down a slope. He looked into the sky and saw birds riding the wind. He passed through a jungle and heard monkeys jabbering in the tree-tops. A bush, uprooted by some storm, swarmed with busy insect life. A bird overhead sang to the wind, and far away another answered the call.

"There welled in the soul of man an intense loneliness. He began to seek his own kind. Nature taught him companionship.

"We see it everywhere in Nature, this gathering together of like with like. The bees and the birds seek their kind. A wild violet shoots up near a moss-grown rock, and soon there are many violets growing there. An oak bends its branches toward a sister oak near the lake. Sheep herd together, and wolves gather in packs. Nature has created many separate species and has instilled in each an instinctive liking for its own kind.

"In its broader, finer sense, society means people as a whole — human beings, fellowship. Various external conditions, circumstances of life, have divided society into grades or castes, but society remains fundamentally the same — the whole world of human fellowship to which we all belong.

"The first primitive existence was devoid of the social element. During the first long stretch of prehistory man was too vitally concerned with his individual struggle for survival to have had any real social life. But we have seen how the slumbering social instinct was awakened, how man gradually moved closer to his own kind. It is reasonable to suppose that this instinct was present in man from the very first, but that the hazardous conditions of early life made of man a cautious wanderer before he could be a peaceful clansman.

"As we follow in the footsteps of man, slowly and painfully developing, we see that it was by a series of very natural steps that the society element entered his life. The discovery of the flint-tipped spear, for instance, made it possible for man to supply himself with an abundance of food. And with his cave well filled with food he was not afraid to welcome some wandering fellow and sit with him under the stars. His attitude toward his neighbors began to change. He had plenty of food. Why need they fear each other?

WE see growing up in the lives of these early men a new influence which tends to bind them closer in social relationship. Filled with a vague uneasiness at the big yellow disk that glows above them, marveling at the millions of silver eyes that blink in the night sky, man comes from the darkness of his cave and squats near the fire for warmth and comfort. Presently there comes, out of the shadows, another lonely fellow to join him in the flickering circle of light. Still another wanders close in his loneliness, and another; until they are gathered there in a group — a social group, if you please — the first, crude social gathering.

"Slowly in some localities, more rapidly in others, this custom of gathering silently around the cave fire became a habit — a custom. Man entered definitely upon a social life for the common good. Today man is so thoroughly a social being that, as Walter Dyer says, 'if you place him on a desert island with no one to talk to he is likely to go mad.'

"Since the dawn of social life, certain forces have been constantly at work separating society into classes and dividing each class into many grades. Even in the very beginning there was a favored class of society — the head clansmen, the distinguished warriors, the wizards, the priests, and the medicine men. They belonged to a sort of 'charmed circle' within the clan, a circle which had its own definite privileges.

"We can understand how the clan would have originated, or gathered, around the most powerful and the most widely feared fellow in the vicinity. He became the head clansman, the chief. Let us call him Mr. Strong Man. We can see him squatting in his place of importance, proud of his power, disdainful of the weaker men about him.

"To Mr. Strong Man would be brought all food for distribution. To him also would be brought special 'finds' — a curious shell tossed up by the sea, a stone shaped like an animal through some strange freak of nature, a necklace made of human teeth. These possessions belonged to him by right of his leadership. And as his possessions they were absolutely taboo to the others.

"Just as the mob must always have its leader, just as groups of any kind must always have leadership, society always has some nucleus around which the members of any particular class or grade gather. In primitive society leadership belonged to Mr. Strong Man. Since he had more skins than the others, since he was more powerful and more to be feared, he was treated with deference, and the other members of the clan gathered to do him homage.

"There were, of course, outcasts in this early society. The weak, the sick, the timid, the blind were ostracized, for they hindered rather than helped the clan. We might say that they were at the 'bottom of society.' The women, too, were of a lower order, for they were separated from, and had none of the privileges of, the clan's favored class.

CASTE appears to have had more influence upon our habits of life, upon our manners and customs, than any other one factor. Throughout all the ages of life, caste has been dividing society into different levels or classes, each class with its own established mode of life.

"We have already witnessed the first appearance of caste within the primitive clan. Here we have our first example of social differentiation. The head clansman has possessions taboo to the others; he has privileges and distinctions enjoyed by no one else within the clan.

"It did not take very long for an impressive caste system to grow up around the priests, wizards, and magicians of the clan. These were the men who pretended to be in direct communication with the Unknown; who frightened away the lightning and attracted the rain; who cured all ills and caused injury to enemies. And for their services they received the best that the clan, or the tribe, had to offer. Many of these people accumulated vast properties and treasures, and history tells us of primitive civilizations that grew up around them, lasted a brief span, and disappeared forever.

"Wealth has probably done more to divide society into castes or classes than anything else. In early life wealth was measured in flint axes and spears, warm skins, pottery, foods. Later the standard of wealth was fixed in landed property. Kings granted great tracts of land to their favorites, and these favorites became powerful landowners. They had special rights and privileges denied the people who lived on their land.

THE artisan class represents another great cross section of society. These are the craftsmen, the makers of pottery, the weavers, the carpenters. At one time crafts or professions were hereditary, and no member of a family was permitted to step out of the craft or profession practiced by the rest of the family. To have done so would have been to step out of caste.

"Religion has divided society into classes. Education has been a tremendous dividing factor. Special talents have further tended to separate society. Fashion, environment, political conditions within a country, wars, and revolutions — all have had their influence upon social life.

"It would be tiresome to discuss the many other castes of society and the conditions of life that have helped to divide society into different classes. There have been the soldiery and the seamen, the merchants and the retailers, the servants and the slaves. Countless forces have been molding and shaping society through the ages; until today its pattern is all patches and threads, like the 'crazy quilt' handed down from grandmother's day!"

Sixty Seconds From Life

WIND leaped out of alley courts and squeezed between buildings in sharp spasmodic spurts, racing over the pavement, accompanied by splattering arpeggios of rain. Nicholas Karolyi shivered as the moisture began to soak through his threadbare suitcoat, becoming clammy and dank against his skin. Buildings exhaled oblongs of yellow into the night, casting ghostly, grotesque lights upon the dark waters of the Danube. The gayness of Budapest seemed devoured by an unfamiliar bleakness. Karolyi trudged on, desolately, his shoes spurling water at every step. Through the sparkle and fume of the rain-colored night, the lights of cafe signs burned like golden-lettered banners flung stiffly into the storm. About the lights floated patches of yellow mist, through which the rain swarmed in furies of little gleaming moths. Karolyi stopped in the lee of a shop entrance, and shook himself like a dog. He ran the palm of his hand downward roughly across his face, wiping it on the frayed lining of his coat. A cobwebby glimmer from a street lamp illuminated his face for a moment as he raised his head to the light. His expression was strangely alarming — like a sentence full of unexpected adjectives, startling and meaningless, reminiscent of the Macbeth that Van Gogh never painted. Karolyi's teeth sounded a tattoo in chattering accompaniment to the splash of the rain on the pavement. His thin, starved body swayed in the wind as, with hands dug deeply into pockets — head bent forward, he continued along the river bank.

As he trudged doggedly onward toward his rendezvous, Karolyi became conscious of the great dome of St. Stephens Cathedral outlined in swarthy silhouette against the black, murky sky. He saw it through half closed eyes, lashes heavy with raindrops. A prayer trembled on his lips. He slackened his pace for a moment, his face raised to an invisible cross, then hurried on toward Pont Elizabeth.

As he reached the open unprotected space along the approach to Elizabeth bridge, a cold, penetrating wind, sweeping over the river, blew the rain like particles of glass against his skin. But he didn't notice the wind and the cold now. An unnatural warmth, like some strange fever, burned within him as he turned onto the bridge and started across the Danube toward the Pest side of the river.

He stood erect, eyes ahead, marching! He was back at the front again—twenty years! Marching in the rain! Rain, marching! Falling in torrents, the rain beat against the pavement like the staccato roll of drums. A flash of lightning illuminated the sky for a moment — a warning rocket — followed by a deep rumble like enemy guns — menacing. Karolyi stopped near the center of the bridge. He looked down at the black waters that people said were so blue. People said many things! What did it matter? He sought a hold on the wet, slippery steel arch with frail, bony hands — there wasn't much strength left in them now — and with an effort climbed to the ledge. There below—his rendezvous!

His knees were bent for a leap, when arms like steel bands encircled him yanking him roughly backward. Hardly had his feet touched the pavement, before firm, authoritative hands swung him around and the bright beam of an electric torch was thrown on him. The police! He had been clumsy! Karolyi waited in silence for the officer to speak.

"Well, you're a calm one, I'll say that for you. Thought it all out, I suppose—farewell note and all! Let's see what's in those pockets." The officer went quickly through Karolyi's wet, soggy clothing. In the pocket of the vest his fingers touched a cross. He stopped in his search as he felt the outline with thumb and index finger without drawing it forth.

"The decoration, the Iron Cross, it is yours?"

KAROLYI barely nodded. "You are a hero in the eyes of your country. Why do you want to die?" There was a note of respect, of sympathy in the voice that was not lost on Karolyi despite the parade of disconnected thoughts that kaleidoscoped through his tormented mind. Hero! Funny—that word—now!

"Because there is nothing left to live for. For five years I have had no work. We have starved—my wife and child. My little girl," he choked, "never free from the pangs of hunger since the day she was born. It was too terrible, dying, dying—each day a little more. It is better so. Death is merciful."

"But can't you see man, you're leaving them alone, helpless without you! Come, courage! Your decoration—you haven't forgotten that?"

"No, I haven't forgotten it."

"Then go back home to your family. They need you."

Karolyi shook his head. "No, they are safe now. I sent them away—today."

"You mean you've found a place for them where they will be looked after?"

"Where they will be looked after, yes," Karolyi assented. Drawing his dripping hat from his head, he took a folded slip of paper from the band and handed it to the officer. "Here is the suicide note. I had forgotten." The officer took it from him, and turning slightly to shelter the flimsy paper from the rain and wind, directed his electric torch upon it. An expression of horror fixed itself upon his face as he read:

"Tonight I strangled to death my wife and child in a cellar at No. 9 Vaczi Korut. I did it because I loved them. I could not bear to see them suffer so. They were starving and ill. Death was not far away, but it was agony for them to wait. I am following them. God will be merciful, and find a place for us. Nicholas Karolyi."

A lull came in the wind and rain, as the officer finished reading the amazing note, pencilled in an unsteady hand on the scrap of soiled paper. As he turned, the faint sound of a splash in the river below came to his ears. Without going to the rail he folded the note, placed it in a dry pocket under his voluminous cape, and started for the station to make his report. He thought of the Iron Cross in Karolyi's pocket, and told himself that true courage never dies.

Seascapes

IVE HEARD many tales of ships and things; I've seen strange things myself.

None of them mystified me more than the strange disappearance of the McGinnis. Perhaps you'd like to know about it. When just a week ago, I was sailor on one of a fleet of 45 small sailing vessels that handled nothing but general cargoes, except an occasional load of dye-wood for the American markets, or perhaps, mahogany logs. With so many vessels in the fleet, it naturally followed that sometimes five or six—and I can remember once ten vessels — were together for days. Somehow, we seemed to get together about Christmas time, in the home port. The McGinnis was just one of them. She, like several others, sailed immediately after New Years Day. We were in sight of each other for several days. Then one night we must have gotten different ideas as to courses steered.

Captain Barry

At daylight we were alone. Not a sail, anywhere, on the horizon. Just the vast, ever restless sea, fanned by a breeze that moaned in the rigging, suggesting that the ship's shrouds might well be changed for another kind. I never saw a vessel's crew have less to say even though, in reality, it was a spanking wind that sent us on our way. About the time we made a land-fall off Brazos, Santiago, our destination, sail-commenced seemingly to pop up from the sea about us. Everyone was there in good time and shape. That night we anchored, a reasonable distance apart, off the bar, to await daylight and pilots. Sometime after midnight, the wind went down, and by daylight, there was a dead calm. We were forced to lie at anchor all day and night.

"THE MCGINNIS" By Captain C. E. Barry

Morning came the second day with continued calm. The ground-swell had subsided; the ruffle of the reef-points against the belly of the spanker was the only noise made by the slow roll of the deep-laden vessel. During the forenoon of the second day, whale-boats, and gigs, were lowered by some of the vessels, for the purpose of visiting. I remember the mate took me along to pull the stroke-oar in his boat, and the last vessel we visited, was the McGinnis. Her officers and men alike reported a good run down, and everything was fine—shipshape.

LIKE others, we returned to our own vessel at noon. It was so calm, by that time, the gig was made fast at the mizzen chains and left there—without even dropping it astern, so you know it must have been smooth. After lunch when we came on deck, the McGinnis was gone! The lookout said he had his back in her direction, turned 'round, and could not see her. Just as he was about to sing out, we started coming on deck. Crews of the other vessels reported much the same.

There was never a thing found floating, but some time later, the bodies of some of the crew came ashore. I remember the son of Captain Le Rouche was one of them.

This story, perhaps, seems flat; but, I've felt flat myself since it happened.

Walla Walla Pays Tribute to Early Settlers

Whitman Centennial Commemorates Arrival Of First Women Missionaries

By Claude M. Gray

PEACEFUL conquest of the Pacific Northwest, the only territorial accession to the United States of the North American continent without clash of arms or governmental purchase, was achieved by the potent influences of wagon wheels and spinning wheels.

It was 100 years ago this summer that the first two white homemakers left the security of the East and turned their faces westward toward a land inhabited only by Indians, hunters, traders and trappers. And they were women!

They came west to establish homes for their husbands, who had been stirred by the thrilling call for the "white man's religion," some years earlier by a group of Flathead Indians through a visit to St. Louis.

These two women were Narcissa Prentiss Whitman and Eliza Hart Spalding. As a result of their bravery in renouncing the comforts of civilization they were to be the first to help establish, not only the first white homes in Old Oregon then held jointly by the United States and Great Britain under a joint treaty of control, but the first churches and schools as well.

Both were to become mothers in the then "wild" West, and Mrs. Whitman was to give her life alongside that of Dr. Marcus Whitman, her husband, in the savage massacre November 29, 1847, which was to temporarily halt efforts to educate and Christianize the interior Indians.

The Whitman party reached old Fort Walla Walla early in the fall of 1836. At Waiilatpu, Dr. Whitman established his mission, the first in the great Inland Empire which now takes in parts of Washington, Oregon and Idaho. The Rev. Henry H. Spalding, husband of Eliza Hart Spalding, later that winter founded a mission at Lapwai. Waiilatpu is six miles from Walla Walla, Washington, and Lapwai is near Lewiston, Idaho.

Three men whose figures were to loom high in the history of California followed the Oregon Trail, whose first women travelers were these two pioneers. They were John Augustus Sutter, John Charles Fremont and Peter H. Burnett.

Sutter traveled overland to California in 1838 by way of the Oregon Trail a way point of which was the Waiilatpu mission. Fremont passed nearby on his 1843 trip to California bearing the commission from high government officials which was to have such an important effect upon the future of that state. Burnett was in the great wagon train of 1843 as a member of Captain Jesse Applegate's division.

The Whitman mission started settlement of the territory whose historical background includes such figures as Lewis and Clark, Sacajawea, Peter Skene Ogden, Dr. John McLoughlin and Isaac Stevens, later governor of Washington Territory.

Fremont rendered valuable service to the Oregon Territory and the emigrants which began pouring across the mountains after 1842. That year he was sent as the head of a party to explore the Oregon Trail beyond the Mississippi as far as South pass in Wyoming, which was crossed by the Whitman party July 4, 1836.

He surveyed the trail thoroughly and his excellent description greatly aided the emigrants of following years. In 1843 he was sent to complete the survey of the trail to the mouth of the Columbia, his guide on that as well as on the previous expedition being the picturesque Kit Carson. From the Oregon Settlements Fremont turned south and east to California via Northwestern Nevada. He spent that winter near Sutter's fort on the Sacramento river. He returned to the States the southern route.

IN THE summer of 1835 W. Whitman who had practiced medicine in Canada four years, had come as far west as the Green river, Wyoming, rendezvous, accompanying the Rev. Samuel Parker to investigate the number of Indians in Oregon. The large numbers of the tribesmen at the rendezvous convinced Parker and Whitman that missions among the Indians were immediately desirable and it was decided that the latter would return to recruit a larger party to go west the following year. Whitman took back with him two Indian boys who spent the winter at his home in New York state attending school. Parker continued west and planned to meet the party Whitman would recruit in the Oregon Country the next summer.

Whitman convinced members of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, which had sent him and Parker west, that a larger party would be desirable and enlisted the little band of five missionaries for the following year. That winter Whitman and Miss Prentiss were married. Another young couple interested in bringing the Gospel to the western Indians, the Rev. and Mrs. Henry H. Spalding, were signed up as well as W. H. Gray, who went as a mechanic to help the two men in the labors of making homes for themselves in the Far West.

The location of the Whitman mission on the Walla Walla River at Waiilatpu, the "place of rye grass," among the Cayuse and Walla Walla Indians and that of the Spalding mission at Lapwai on the Clearwater among the Nez Perces was determined in a conference with Dr. John McLoughlin, the famous factor of the Hudson's Bay Company at Vancouver, Washington. The newcomers had visited him immediately upon reaching Oregon and had been hospitably received by him.

In the crude log cabin with its earth floor, rough fireplace and openings for door and window, built by men of the mission party after returning from the conference with McLoughlin, there was born, March 14, 1837, to Dr. and Mrs. Whitman a daughter, Alice Clarissa, the first child of American white parents to be born west of the Rocky mountains. Her life was brief. When she was barely over two years of age, she was accidentally drowned in the swift stream which ran behind their cabin.

First letters which Mrs. Whitman received from home had taken two years and six months to reach her, coming by sailing vessel from Boston around Cape Horn to the Sandwich Islands and thence by a chance schooner to the mouth of the Hudson's Bay Company up the river to Forts Walla Walla and Waiilatpu.

Both the Whitmans and Spaldings set in at once teaching the Indians the arts of civilization, particularly agriculture and horticulture. The school of the Whitmans was the first between the Rockies and the Cascades. The mission grew and prospered. The Indians seemed deeply interested in their new friends and teachers though their nomadic habits and their custom of going on an annual hunting trip beyond the Rocky mountains for buffalo made its success more difficult.

of her own class was at least 100 miles away. There were no radios, no telephones, no automobiles, no trains which she might use. But this plucky woman let nothing daunt her and kept occupied rearing her adopted family of half-breed Indian children. Two of these were daughters of mountain men, Jim Bridger and Joe Meek.

A lifelong friendship between Whitman and Bridger had been struck up at the 1835 rendezvous when the young doctor removed a three-inch arrowhead from the mountain man's back. His half-breed daughter, Mary Ann Bridger, was one of Mrs. Whitman's first foster children, who came to the mission about 1840.

The wagon train of 1843, numbering 800 American citizens with 200 wagons and 2,000 horses and oxen, had as members of its party both Whitman and Peter Burnett, later California's first American governor.

He was its sole guide from Fort Hill in Idaho to the Grand Ronde river in Oregon at which point he left the leadership to a friendly Indian after he received an urgent message that Mrs. Spalding was ill at Lapwai. Whitman was ever ready to travel at any season of the year to the bedside of an ill person, be it white or Indian. After treating her he hurried home to prepare supplies for the wagon train.

FROM 1843 onward Americans were in an overwhelming majority in Oregon and when finally by treaty with Great Britain the Northwest boundary line was determined June 15, 1846, the line was drawn at the 49th parallel and the vast region from California to British Columbia passed into the permanent and undisputed possession of the United States.

Whitman settled down at Waiilatpu to his missionary work as doctor, surgeon, teacher, farmer and helper of his fellow men. With the greatly increased number of Americans streaming into the Pacific Northwest, the Indians became suspicious. They felt that they were likely to be driven from their native land and they came to hold Dr. Whitman as responsible for the threatening invasion.

Measles broke out at Waiilatpu in the fall of 1847 and spread rapidly. When some of the Indians died, despite Dr. Whitman's treatment, Indian custom dictated revenge upon the medicine man.

The cause for the brutal massacre of November 29, 1847, probably never will be fully known. A sudden uprising of the hostile and disaffected element among the Indians killed both Dr. and Mrs. Whitman and most of the men and boys connected with the mission, 14 in all. About 50 women and children were spared. After a month they were ransomed by a rescue party from the Hudson's Bay Company post at Fort Vancouver, led by Peter Skene Ogden.

To commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the arrival of the Whitman party in the Walla Walla valley national organizations will join with Walla Walla citizens to memorialize the Whitmans, not only because they were martyrs to a missionary cause, but more because they were the earliest of the Oregon country's pioneer settlers. This celebration will be held August 13 to 16 inclusive in Walla Walla.

Thursday, August 13, the American Medical Association will honor Dr. Whitman as the first physician to practice in the Northwest.

Friday, August 14, will be dedicated to Mrs. Whitman, the Pioneer Mother, with memorial services in charge of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the American Association of University Women, the National Federation of Music Clubs and the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

The Oregon Trail Memorial Association will have charge of the Saturday, August 15, services, in honoring the establishment of the Whitman mission. Dr. Howard Driggs, New York City, president of the association, will be a speaker that day. Cooperating in the Saturday services will be the western region of the American Farm Bureau Federation, commemorating Dr. Whitman as the first farmer, irrigationist and horticulturist in the Inland Empire of the Northwest.

Concluding the celebration on Sunday, August 16, will be a mammoth religious service conducted jointly by the Presbyterian and Congregational churches and the board of commissioners of foreign missions.

Recognition has been given the celebration by the national government through the issuance July 14 of the Oregon Territory stamp which commemorated the arrival of the first white families, those of Whitman and Spalding, in the Pacific Northwest.

A bill for the establishment of the Whitman national monument at Waiilatpu and the restoring of the original mission buildings has been passed by Congress and signed by President Roosevelt. The community will donate the site to the government for this restoration and designation of the site as a national monument park site.

A third federal recognition was the passage by Congress and signing by President Roosevelt of a bill for the minting of a Whitman commemorative medal.

The Oregon Trail Memorial association donated 1000 silver half dollars of a special 1936 coinage early in July which were sold and proceeds used in purchasing the Whitman mission site.

Whitman earlier was recognized through the erection of a statue to himself in Witherspoon Park in Philadelphia. The memories of both Dr. and Mrs. Whitman have been commemorated through the establishment of Whitman College at Walla Walla more than 75 years ago; by having a monument erected on a hilltop near the site of their mission; through having a national forest in Eastern Oregon named for them; and now by the establishment of a national monument site on the very ground where they worked and struggled for the most of 11 years almost a century ago.

WALLA WALLA, the city which is honoring Dr. and Mrs. Marcus Whitman, was established November 17, 1859. It long was the site of Fort Walla Walla, three locations bearing this name having been either within its present limits or nearby. The first Fort Walla Walla was established in 1818 near the mouth of the Walla Walla river. The next Fort Walla Walla, established during the Indian wars of the early '50's which continued intermittently after the Whitman massacre of 1847, was located on what is now Main street in Walla Walla adjoining Mill creek, so named because Dr. Whitman had a sawmill on it where it emerges from the Blue mountains.

The third Fort Walla Walla was abandoned in 1910 and following the World war the grounds were turned over to the United States Public Health Service for the establishment of a veterans' hospital. Today a modern hospital houses 400 patients there.

It is against such a rich historical background that plans have been developed for the Whitman Centennial Celebration, generally acknowledged as the major historical program in the Pacific Northwest this year.

The program of the four days includes the memorial events in which various national organizations are participating, and also lists historical parades, pageantry, special features and other attractions such as only the spirit of the West makes possible.

Recognizing the contribution of the wagon wheel to the development of the West, the men of Walla Walla have banded together in behalf of the Centennial as the "Wagon Wheelers" adopting colorful outfits which they have worn in public appearances. The women of the community, likewise grouped together for various activities, used the spinning wheel and its contribution to history as their title theme in selecting "Spinning Wheelers" as their group name.

One and all, recognizing the great part the wagon trains played in bringing the Northwest into possession of the United States by peaceful conquest, the people have adopted the slogan this summer of "Wagons West!"

Directors Blamed for Blighted Movie Careers

Director Has Power To Make Or Break Star And Often Does, Says Clarence Brown

By Linda Lane

HOLLYWOOD directors are heartbreakers! Many a promising star of cinema land has failed to skyrocket to the stellar planets of fame through the unsympathetic, harsh handling of directors.

Take it from Clarence Brown—top ranking MGM director—his profession wrecks more promising movie careers than it ever makes!

Harsh words, perhaps, but Brown backs them up with 16 years of film work. And he doesn't exclude himself. Call Hollywood the city of heartbreaks—but don't forget to call directors the prime Hollywood heartbreakers!

"You can trace the ever present dearth of new film faces to supplant old idols directly to the doors of Hollywood's directors," Brown said, as he relaxed after his day of "shooting" on the set of "Gorgeous Hussy," Joan Crawford's latest.

"How many Janet Gaynors, Bette Davises, yes, even Shirley Temples, do you suppose have been 'killed off' at the very start because of 'mis-handling'? I'd hate to try to estimate the number.

"Add to that the fact that we're all of us too much inclined to be unobservant, and you'll see what I mean. I often wonder how many potentially great screen stars have gone on and on as extras without ever being noticed or given even a small chance by directors," he added.

Brown is a retiring, modest sort of person. Privately, you'd never think him capable of commanding the often vast armies of players that appear in some lavish scenes. Directing a film frequently takes on the aspect of military generalship, and not only where so-called "mob" scenes are concerned. Handling even one of the more temperamental stars can be quite as exacting and trying a job as maneuvering several thousand extras.

Well, get on with Brown's indictment of himself and his fellows.

"It was intelligent, penetrating thought that made Maurice Stiller see the genius underlying the shy, youthfully awkward girl that was later to become the great Greta Garbo. Yet the early handling of her in this country might have wrecked her screen chances. Luckily Stiller was on hand to encourage and advise her."

BROWN'S observations concerning the Great Greta, Hollywood's No. 1 topic for discussion for 10, these many years, recalls a number of similar cases. Janet Gaynor, for example, was given only a few minor bits before Frank Borzage, a quiet-spoken, keen judge of screen folk, picked her for the famous part in "Seventh Heaven" which lofted her overnight to a popularity that remains undimmed.

Even Miss Gaynor will admit to a nervousness that bordered on terror during the making of that film. Given the wrong sort of direction and her screen career would have closed almost before it got started.

Just how much unsympathetic direction can be blamed for the downfall of some short-lived stars is an unanswerable question. There is a story in Hollywood, though, that Warner Baxter's screen career came near a permanent close shortly before the advent of talking pictures when a director objected so strenuously and so scathingly to the way he entered a door that he was withdrawn from the film. Later, "In Old Arizona" and "The Cisco Kid," made with the proper co-operation between player and director, restored Baxter to top billing on the billboards and top ranking with the fans.

"All the Hollywood heartbreaks aren't attributable to the mistakes we directors make, naturally," commented Brown. "Too often really excellent people are miscast. Sometimes it happens quite accidentally that a director is ignorant of some phase of a player's abilities, or fails to utilize it correctly. Then the reaction is against the player—even though the fault might have been the script writer's, or the director's."

Quite a few film fans will recall Ginger Rogers' debut in "Young Man of Manhattan," but many will prefer to forget several of the subsequent roles she had—and which weren't potentialities of Ginger's personality—but eventually, when "The Gay Divorcee" hit the screen, Ginger hit the top. Filmland can gossip of a dozen similar occurrences.

BUT what of the hundreds who never got beyond the "bit" stage? That's where the tragedy and the heartbreak come in, says Brown. To be a star one day and a "has-been" next is the customary Hollywood formula for tragedy, yet he believes the undiscovered talent—and, most of all, the discouraged talent is a

Ruggles Rated As Ace Director

"YOU ought to be in pictures" is more than a song title if you hear it from a certain Hollywood executive.

The man from whose lips the phrase takes on real meaning is Wesley Ruggles, who produces as well as directs for his studio.

It was Ruggles who first realized the possibilities of Jack Oakie, Clark Gable, Fred MacMurray, Arline Judge and Irene Dunne. It's the same Ruggles who is rescuing Gladys George, feature player of "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie," from an indifferent movie career. And it is again the same Ruggles who thinks he has found in Jackie Moran, juvenile of his present picture, one of the greatest child actors in or out of motion pictures.

Gable might still be playing hard-boiled crooks had not Ruggles, sensing the actor's gift for light comedy, cast him in "No Man of Her Own," with Carole Lombard, placing him squarely on the road to his present-day success.

When Ruggles picked her for "Cimarron," Irene Dunne didn't know a movie camera from a casaba. She, too, was literally scared stiff but Ruggles knew that, given time and encouragement, she would come through with superb performance. She's gone far in justifying that faith.

Ruggles has a simple, thoroughly rational way of selecting possible star material.

"When you get an actor who knows why he is reading a line, rather than one who is simply stringing together a lot of words, you've got someone who bears watching," he says.

"Growing Up With Hollywood"

By Robert Z. Leonard

Noted Director of "The Great Ziegfeld" and Other Famous Film Productions (Concluded.)

WITH steady improvement in film and acting, productions went smoothly on their way. Some of the silent stars found they could sing and dance in pictures. Joan Crawford crooning a song and Marion Davies doing a song-and-dance in the first "Hollywood Revue."

In this connection it is interesting to recall that, when "Hollywood Revue of 1929" followed, one of its features was a part-travesty on the balcony scene of "Romeo and Juliet" done by Norma Shearer and John Gilbert. Needless to say, Miss Shearer then never dreamed she was to be the foremost Juliet of another day with Leslie Howard as Romeo in the present incomparably beautiful film production of "Romeo and Juliet."

Still another unimagined achievement of different kind was the production of "Broadway Melody," the first outstanding musical success in Hollywood's rapid-fire history.

At the outset Hunt Stromberg, as the active producer of "The Great Ziegfeld," bore the responsibility of a tremendous undertaking, while I, as director, and with my mind going back to high school days in Denver when I served as super in a Ziegfeld show, had my hands full. Six months were given to preparatory work, study of the scenario by William Anthony McGuire, author of various Ziegfeld "Follies," and arrangement of the thousand and one details. Money was no object, only results counted.

Utmost care was taken in choosing the cast, particularly its three stars. In the case of William Powell there was never any question, as his poise, aplomb and flair for the glamour of the theater made him the natural choice for the character of that world-famed showman, Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr. But some fifty tests were made before Luise Rainer, the charming newcomer from Vienna I had just finished directing with Mr. Powell in "Escapade," proved ideally suited to the role of Anna Held at twenty-five, when that exotic star's beauty was radiantly fascinating. Billie Burke's affection for "Flo" being still so deep and warm that she felt it impossible for her to portray emotionally scenes she had actually shared, it became necessary to find someone else to embody the devoted wife of Ziegfeld's later years. Who, then, but our own endearing Myrna Loy.

Having met "Ziggy" in New York, I renewed acquaintance in Hollywood. Always of the theater, he could not understand why Will Rogers, W. C. Fields and Eddie Cantor were content to live in Hollywood rather than return with him to the New York stage. As a matter of fact and favor to him, Rogers did go back to appear in an additional "Follies." It had also been agreed that Will would play himself in "The Great Ziegfeld." When his untimely end changed that cherished plan, we faced the seemingly impossible task of finding someone who looked like the beloved cowboy-humorist. In desperation, the studio advertised. One day, to our joy and amazement, in walked Rogers' living prototype, A. A. Trimble, an insurance agent from Cleveland, O., who had been wont to amuse his friends with imitations of Will.

We were fortunate, too, in having as musical director Arthur Lang, who had filled that position with the "Follies." Using some of the actual songs by Irving Berlin and Jerome Kern, we added others, including the picture's song-hit, "You," written by Walter Donaldson. And who better to direct the dances than Seymour Felix, also for years with Ziegfeld.

The next thing was the selection, from among some 2000 applicants, of sixty-five beautiful girls to be duly "glorified." Equal care was bestowed upon the costumes, most of them by Adrian. In one song number, "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," we used twenty show girls wearing costumes so gorgeous and elaborate that each girl was attended by three wardrobe women.

But perhaps the biggest and most difficult job of all was that of reconstructing and vitalizing the Midway Pleasance of the Chicago World's Fair of 1893, with its Streets of Cairo, concessions, lagoons, gondolas and picturesque throngs, where Ziegfeld began his showman's career as the exhibitor of Sandow, the Strong Man.

As the area on which we worked out that immense spectacle slowly changed before our eyes, I couldn't help thinking how Hollywood, too, had changed with the years. When I first saw it twenty-nine years ago its people numbered about 1000, a population since grown to 160,000. Where the garden of Paul de Longpre, famous painter, blossomed in the sun, the jangling shadow from a fifteen-story office building now falls across the street. From a green lane Hollywood Boulevard has grown into a young Broadway.

This is the Hollywood of today and, like the Hollywood of yesterday, it will live long and gratefully in my memory.

Pig Brought U.S. And Britain To Brink Of War

By Benjamin H. Sefrit

ON the Pacific Coast in the State of Washington in 1855, an event not unlike the famous Boston Tea Party nearly catapulted the United States into another war with Great Britain — and all because of the insatiable desire of a pig for the potatoes of a neighbor farmer. The occurrence reverberated through the stately halls of the English parliament, and caused no little anxiety in the hearts of an American president and his cabinet. It seems incredible that a war might have been started because an insignificant pig wandered into a potato patch and was shot, but it is true and of great historical importance.

Despite statements by American and English historians that the War of 1812 was the final conflict between the United States and Great Britain, actually the last war, even though undeclared, started in 1855.

Few are those familiar with the boundary dispute between this nation and its mother country over the occupancy of San Juan Island, a part of the scenic wonderland of the Puget Sound region, but it required the attentions of the diplomatic corps of two great nations, a portion of the army and navy, and, finally, was definitely settled by Emperor William I of Germany.

The whole thing started when C. J. Griffith, agent of Hudson's Bay Company on the island, had a fat pig that tried to satisfy its gnawing hunger in the thriving potato patch of Lyman A. Cutler, an American farmer who became irked by the regular forages of Griffith's pig, and shot it.

Back in 1854 when Indians were roaming the bays and hills of the Puget Sound country, making their last frantic effort to curb this wanton invasion of their hunting and fishing grounds, I. N. Ebey, U. S. collector of the customs for the district of Puget Sound, attempted to carry out his duties and collect the assessments due his country. He understood that under the treaty of 1846, San Juan Island belonged to the United States.

Charles Griffith, the man who owned the troublesome pig, refused to acknowledge Ebey's right to levy duties and insisted that the island belonged to the colony of Vancouver.

About a year later Silas Barnes, sheriff of Whatcom County, a rather stubborn Yank, visited the island and informed the Hudson's Bay agent that the taxes (amounting to about $80) must be paid. When payment was refused he seized 30 head of sheep, which he sold at public auction. While he and successful American bidders were loading the sheep into a boat, Griffith with several Indians, armed with knives, rushed to the beach, but were driven off when the sheriff flourished his trusted blunderbuss.

The Voracious Appetite of a Pig Brought the United States and Great Britain to the Verge of a War in 1855. At the Upper Left is Pictured a Nook of Peaceful San Juan Island in Puget Sound Which Was the Scene of the Near Conflict. Griffith again appealed to his governor, and Douglas wrote of the affair to Governor Stevens, of Washington Territory. Stevens' reply to Douglas was sharp and to the point that he would uphold the actions of his officer, who was merely exercising his duties as sheriff.

Very shortly thereafter the pig episode occurred. After Griffith's international pig had, on several occasions, entered Cutler's potato patch, the American is reported to have said, "You'll have to keep that pig out of my potatoes." To this appeal Griffith made the facetious reply, "You'd better keep your potatoes out of my pig."

CUTLER then shot the pig and offered to pay Griffith, but the Briton refused. A few days later he set the ridiculous price of $100. Cutler naturally refused, whereupon Griffith complained to Victoria and demanded the arrest of Cutler. Officers were sent, but Cutler, reinforced by other Americans, would not be taken.

July fourth rolled around and Americans even in the far western corner of the United States breathed free air more deeply with their reminiscence of the fight for independence. "They were Americans and not subject to the laws of His Majesty's government," they said, and erected a flagpole upon which the Stars and Stripes were "boldly" spread to the breeze. There were approximately 14 colonists in the American group and all took turns at delivering patriotic speeches, prolonging the celebration for several days.

While the flag was flying, General Harney, the United States military head of the district, was returning from a visit to Victoria, and, seeing the flag, he landed to determine who was responsible for its presence. He learned from the colonists of their fear of Indian invasions and also of the pig episode.

General Harney took up the matter with Governor Stevens, and armed forces under the command of Captain Pickett of Fort Bellingham were landed on the island. When Governor Douglas of Victoria heard of Pickett's landing, he sent Captain Hornby, the ranking naval officer (in absence of Admiral R. L. Bayne), to proceed with his H.M.S. Tribune to San Juan. He also instructed Colonel Moody of the Royal Engineers to embark his forces on H.M.S. Plumber and proceed to the scene. Hornby, knowing that his superior would arrive upon the station in a few days, delayed making the landing of his forces. His action, taking his own sweet time, followed up by a similar attitude on the part of Admiral Bayne, probably averted a serious clash. Hornby visited with Pickett at his camp after Pickett had refused his invitation for a meeting on the Tribune, between us — missed by an inch or so, not enough to make you feel easy about it.

A minute or more we lay sprawled in the dust, watchin' the elephant go tearing down the street, past the hotel and on into someone's garden. He didn't know where he was headed, but the rider knew. He was aimed for Bill an' me, Bill especially — to tramp him down, let the native jump off and gather in the Angkor parchment.

Bill got up slowly. "You wanted to walk," he said.

"Did you wonder if we're watched?" Bill grinned. "Now you know."

"I've got to keep you alive," I said, "so you'd better do what I say now an' then. We're still headed for the Continent."

"I've been looking forward to it," Bill sighed.

We made it, a bit later. Stood before the desk an' persuaded the native clerk we were honest men in rags — rich elephant buyers who'd gone through hard weather to keep a date with M. Callaux that night. Would he give us a room, quick? And tubs of water?

"And a siphon," reminded Bill, "with what goes with it."

WE passed money across the counter, and the clerk called a half naked boy. He led us down a narrow corridor to a room with one small window, which was on the edge of the forest.

An hour later Bill climbed out of a wooden tub in his birthday clothes, tryin' to dry himself. But that wasn't needed. He was about dry before he'd waved his arms with a towel.

I fixed him a long, cold glass of inspiration which he drained without stoppin' for breath.

"To the green goddess!" he says. His back to the window, an' something — a dark figure, looked like — passed by, then was gone. Eyes seemed to be all around us, but we didn't see anyone except the lad on the wild elephant.

The map in Bill's belt lay on the bed, where he'd tossed it before takin' his dip.

"Let 'em come," Bill boasted, stretchin' his muscles. "I feel like mixin' with half a dozen Sin Kews —"

ON AUGUST 10, under instructions from General Harney, Colonel Casey landed on the island with reinforcements, and as senior officer, took over the command. His forces, added to Pickett's totaled 461 men. They had eight 32-pounder guns, one six-pounder and five mountain howitzers. The British force consisted of five ships of war, 2140 men and a total of 167 guns. San Juan took on the appearance of a grim battle scene.

Meanwhile, in Victoria, legislative bodies questioned the executive arm of the government as to why British troops had not been landed and said, "It is not for our country to be wantonly and insolently insulted, but redress must be demanded," in reference to the landing of American troops on San Juan. Feeling ran high, but it was mutual, for had the English landed there would have been a bloody battle.

The situation became so acute that General Winfield Scott, chief of the U. S. army, was sent by the President to pour oil on the troubled waters. He received his instructions in a report from W. R. Drinkard, acting secretary of war.

When he arrived at the scene of the famous "pig war," he found the situation had reached the boiling point, and Pickett was sent back to Fort Bellingham, and General Harney, when he refused to obey orders, was called to Washington, D. C. Scott corresponded at length with Governor Douglas, attempting to tone down the flareup by urging a joint occupation of the island.

Diplomatic officials of both countries became greatly alarmed at the situation, and finally agreed that a commission composed of two Americans, Archibald Campbell and Lieutenant John Parke, and two Englishmen, Captain James Prevost and Captain Henry Richards, be named in an attempt to satisfy the boundary dispute.

ABLE arguments were advanced by commissioners of both governments on why San Juan should be American or British territory. The American argument seemed to be far the stronger and the outcome by an impartial tribunal upheld the contention.

There were exchanges of letters between Lewis Cass, U. S. secretary of state, and Lord Russell of Great Britain, but neither government would give in. The island appeared more priceless than was first believed.

After many futile attempts at reaching a decision on the boundary question, both governments agreed in 1869 to call in a ruler of some country to arbitrate. The president of the Swiss republic was called first, but not accepted by the United States congress. The next choice was Emperor William I of Germany, on May 8, 1871. He was accepted.

Both sides presented their arguments before the German monarch, who finally swept his hand across the map designating the present boundary line between the two countries. That gesture was the finish of any serious difficulties between the two major English-speaking countries. Since that time, monuments to years of peace have been erected along the international border, costs borne by Canada and the United States, with the inscription, "Children of a Common Mother."

The hotel was supposed to be respectable, not a spot for attackin' white travelers — elephant buyers with money to spend. I didn't see how two sailors not used to the jungle could get up to Angkor if a band of cut-throats didn't want us. We'd come that far, and with Huui Doon's help might get further, maybe to the hut of the first bonze he knew. Beyond that it was a gamble.

I GOT out of my clothes and into the tub of lukewarm water — splashed around for a time, and got out drippin' on the floor mats. We finished the bottle the boy had brought, and began to feel better — not exhilarated, but back to normal. There's nothin' like a bath an' a drink, specially in Saigon.

I pressed the siphon 'till it squirted air. "Someone's at the door," Bill said.

A tap, tap, came through its flimsy rattans. The door wasn't more than a reed screen, thin. You could look right through it if your head was close.

Bill fastened the belt around his middle, and put on his clothes.

"Let 'em come in, Captain."

"All right," I called. "Who is it?"

A timid Annamite woman stepped inside. A bowl of water was balanced in one hand, a razor in the other. A tiny cake of soap swam around in the bowl.

"I shave — ?" she asked in a squeaky voice. I shook my head. "No. No shave, thanks. We do it ourselves."

She glanced around the room, undecided whether it was safe for us to shave without her assistance. Then her smooth lips drooped. With a slight frown of resignation she bowed and backed through the door.

"Doesn't Sin Kew ever run out of women?" asked Bill. "I don't fancy my throat being cut by an old woman." The shaving-girl hadn't been pretty, and Bill wasn't interested.

We'd wait until it was dark. I decided — then keep our date with the money-lender. There was a queerness about our crazy adventure I didn't like — too many women mixed up in it. The Ternate dancing girl, the young one at Huui Doon's place of business, and now a woman concerned with our beards. You can deal with a man, but a girl is different. You don't know if she wants to murder you or not, an' before you're sure you can't be rough about it.

EMERALD BUDDHA

SYNOPSIS

THE Captain of the "Mary Ann" tells the tale of how his mate, Bill Corkey, meets a dancing girl in a little Ternate hotel. She calls herself a descendant of the ancient Khmer emperor, builder of Angkor Wat in Cambodia. In fear of her life because she knows of a fabulous carved emerald Buddha sought by the Chinese pirate, Sin Kew, she gives Bill the map of a sealed chamber — where is hidden the skeleton of her ancestor and the immensely valuable idol. Bill and the Captain are attacked by Sin Kew's men, and make for their ship. Once aboard the vessel, they sail for Saigon on their way to Angkor ruins, where Bill has promised to search for the emerald god.

The ship ties up at Saigon. Word of their arrival has come by Sin Kew's fast junk, and a Frenchman meets them at the dock, trying to sell them elephants. They put him off until evening, going to visit Huui Doon, a money-lender who owes his life to the Captain. His granddaughter meets them at the door and they enter a dark room where Huui Doon smokes a pipe in the corner. He has expected their arrival. They story continues:

By Whit Wellman
Chapter 3.

"I THINK this worthless body live long time, Capt'n. Too long, maybe. I find life good, since desire no more drives old blood. Eih, to sit in dark an' see others worry an' sad. So, I dream too much. When no dream over pipe, plenty merchant here pay big interest fo' quick money."

"We don't want money, Mister Huui," Bill said.

"I loan nothing fo' you, Capt'n." The old man's voice rose musically with a singing rhythm like a child's. "I give. What is here is fo' you. Huui Doon does not forget one undignified night in Brunel."

It was going to be all right, I saw. And we needed what he could give, might need it badly before Bill's wild chase was ended.

His granddaughter returned with tiny porcelain cups and a blue translucent pitcher. She leaned over our shoulders, pouring the cream-colored wine. Huui Doon declined, clinging to his pipe.

"You go," he ordered, and the girl went again to stand before the door.

"Lookin' at you," Bill said, lifting his cup. "Happiness to your ancestors." I wished him.

Huui Doon removed the pipe from his lips. "I tell you, Capt'n, one thing. Then you say what you want. This. It had fo' you in Saigon. More bad fo' you stay one place, like here. You good to me, now I good to you. You go — you go quick, soon as can."

So, that was it! He'd heard we were wanted by Sin Kew, though he might not know why. He knew it was dangerous to us — to him, also — if we were found at his house. "Thanks," I said. "We won't ask how you know, but it's true."

"My glan'daughter, she watch fo' you. She know maybe you come, Capt'n. Maybe more men come, soon. Fo' you an' your flend."

Bill glanced around, wondering how much of Saigon knew why we were there.

"Here's what we want," I said. "One good rifle and ammunition. More ammunition for two .45 pistols. Then, two outfits, clothes and such things. Food — rice to carry into the jungle. Information on the best way up the river, or the best trail north, to the big lake, Tonle Sap."

Huui Doon listened. His eye-lids closed gently. "To Angkor?" he murmured. "It matters not, Capt'n. All will await you tonight at dusk."

"You are good," I said. "We go, and return at dusk."

"Four hundred miles is long journey, Capt'n. Better I give you chit to bonze — priest of old jungle temple. You sleep at night with him. More safe."

We bowed to Huui Doon. He closed his eyes, nodded at us, and seemed to drift off to sleep — perhaps a weary stupor from the fumes of his pipe. No one knew what went on beneath the smooth skull topped by the black cap.

AT the door, his granddaughter paid us no attention.

"See you later —" Bill said. She removed the cigarette from her lips, and looked at him quietly. Maybe it was too hot to talk. Anyway Bill didn't seem to mind her silence. He smiled, and we walked up the alley toward the main street.

"She doesn't like us," I suggested.

"You'd be surprised. If she didn't like us, she'd talk more. The kid's thinkin'."

"About what?"

"I don't know, Captain — probably something good. We'll find out soon enough, an' lucky, too. We'll need a lot of liking before we're done."

At the end of the wide avenue stood the Hotel Continent, a blaze of white in the sun; a low building, white-washed all over, peeling in spots like the paint off a brass rail. It was siesta hour, when all good natives lolled in doorways, or took a nap behind crumbling mud walls.

"Where we going now?" Bill asked.

We weren't going to meet the Frenchman and let him buy cool drinks because he thought we'd buy elephants. I told him. First, we'd clean up, get shaved an' scrubbed in one of the swelterin' hotel rooms. Next, we'd leave a chit for M. Callaux, regretting that we'd been suddenly called to see a sick friend. I knew that once under his guidance, it'd be long before we could take the jungle trail north. We had to get away that night.

A rickshaw rattled up, with our same coolie pulling it over the cobbles. But after listening to Huui Doon, I wasn't trusting anyone, not even a tired yellow man.

I waved him away.

"Moi!" he muttered, drawing away. "Barbarians!"

Bill looked at me in disgust, bein' tired himself by this time, and ready to ride anywhere. The rickshaw boy had run off chattering, castin' violent looks behind him.

"Why so set on wearing yourself out," says Bill. "I'm not used to walking."

"I want to see if we're slow. It's harder to follow us if we walk along slow an' easy, an' keep an eye out for trouble."

From what I could see, no one knew we were in Saigon. The tumbling houses seemed quiet an' dead, like everyone was asleep. There were tiny openings, of course, where eyes could see two tattered white men strolling down the littered street. A couple of mongrel dogs ran out half-heartedly, snarl'in' at our heels. But they didn't mean business.

Behind us I heard a thud, thud, like big padded feet comin' up slow.

"Look around —" Bill said.

I turned, to see an elephant parading up the street after us. A native was riding him, hanging low over the bull's head like he was half awake. One of the Frenchman's, I thought, being brought to the hotel for inspection. But I didn't have much time to figure more about it —

The native stuck the beast with a hook, and he charged. Straight for us. More at Bill than at me, but it didn't matter. An elephant can run, an' this one seemed to climb right on top of us with a couple of awkward gallops.

I couldn't see anything but this mountain of gray flesh pounding down on us.

WE were caught in the middle of the street. No place to dive into, the doorways yards away.

"Split!" yelled Bill, and we did. He leaped to the left, me to the right. The bull thundered

Five Star Fashions

Print Tunic Frock

No. 9729

TUNICS were never so smart as they are this season, and advance information indicates that they will be seen everywhere this fall for daytime, formal and informal wear. Print and plain fabrics are beautifully combined in this model, which uses the solid color of the slimly cut skirt as a nice accent at the side closing, stand-up collar and sleeve bands of the tunic. Composition buttons accent the closing line in smartly tailored detail. The tunic pictured is made up in smooth rayon — a colorful print combining rust, green gold and black, and the same fabric in plain black is used for the skirt and for the trimming detail. This type of frock is good not only as an extra dress to enliven the wardrobe toward the end of summer, as it shows the influence of fall fashion

Attractive Five Star Patterns Are Time And Money Savers

No. 1857-B

MODISH shoulders and a flattering neckline distinguish this youthful sports or morning frock which goes places without effort. Just eight simple pieces to the pattern.

This chic number, easily fashioned by even the amateur at home sewing, makes a grand addition to the wardrobe of the college girl, housewife, or active playgirl. The smart neckline, ample cone pockets, and pointed yoke in the back are all pert and distinctive features which achieve a youthful charm. Try making it of tub silk, shantung, printed crepe, or linen. It's a winner clear to the finish line.

Five Star Pattern No. 1857-B is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards of 39 inch fabric plus 1/4 yard contrast.

THE roomy waist of this adult frock is cleverly concealed by the cut of the lapel and side closing. Youthful in conception, ample in cut and execution.

Adroit styling solves many a clothes problem, as clearly exemplified in this youthful daytime or morning frock for the larger size range. The vertical seams beginning at the yoke and extending down the skirt give a pencil slimmness through the hips. The cross-over, buttoning of the waist conceals the roominess of the gathered blouse. Choose poplin, seersucker, percale, or rayon and jump into this brand new frock in a jiffy.

Five Star Pattern No. 1825-B is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 38 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35 inch fabric.

No. 1832-B

DOES your wardrobe include a frock for every day in the week? This versatile frock answers that description and solves many a problem of what to wear.

The yoke of this unusual frock is a distinctive departure from the ordinary, extending out over the shoulders to form flaring caps — caps that conceal two inverted pleats which are transformed into lovely loose raglan sleeves. The blouse gathers at the yoke and waist in front and back, and the twin panels of the skirt give height. Two huge gathered pockets are interesting and practical features of this all-purpose frock, one which will "make over" your wardrobe.

Five Star Pattern No. 1832-B is designed for sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 34 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35 inch fabric. Choose linen, seersucker, silk crepe, gingham or percale, depending on your needs.

No. 1786-B

THIS clever frock goes to market, stays home, or does whatever else you may require of it. Cool and comfortable for torrid temperatures, it provides year-round utility.

As an ever dependable morning frock to comfort you during the hustle and bustle of a busy day, or as a general utility frock for quick response to a sudden need, this satisfying and serviceable shirtwaist number is easy to look at, to make, and to wear.

Basement Stairs

BASEMENT stairs are all too frequently very steep. In most households many trips must be made to the basement each day. The usual steep, narrow basement stair is dangerous and should be replaced by a wide stair, easy to ascend and descend. At the same time they should be adequately lighted and it should be made certain that the handrail is strong and solid. This type of modernization may be financed by modernization credit loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration.

Crocheted Sport Bag

By Ruth Orr

Pattern No. 230

ACCESSORIES are so important these days. Every last detail must harmonize or the effect is ruined. The model illustrated above is a smart purse that may be carried equally well with afternoon or sports clothes. It is made of mercerized crocheted cotton No. 20, but could be done in No. 30, as the finer cotton produces one more stitch every two inches and so would make only a slight difference in the size. The number 30 is made in a variety of shades so that one might carry out any pet scheme of color.

The pattern envelope contains complete, easy-to-understand illustrated directions, with diagrams to aid you; also what crochet hooks and what material and how much you will need to buy.

To obtain this pattern, send for No. 230 and enclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to cover service and postage. Address Five Star Weekly Needlework Dept., 620 Folsom St., San Francisco, Calif.

Irritability Is Sign Of Nervousness, Dr. McCoy

YOU will probably receive quite a shock when you look up the definition of the word nervous in Webster's Dictionary, for nervous means "Sinewy; strong, vigorous." Undoubtedly, many people are surprised at the first definition given, as they have not thought of nervous as meaning either strong or vigorous.

However, the definition is a good one, for the nervous patient has a high-powered nervous system which should be the greatest help in the world to him. By rights, he should exhibit a force and power not given to his brothers and sisters of a more phlegmatic, easy-going type.

Granting that nervous means strong and vigorous, what have you done to your nerves to rob them of their strength and to reduce them to the irritable, jittery, anxious state in which you now find them? Why are you nervous? In general, it may be said that these are the "Whys" of nervousness: First, nervousness is encouraged, not by over-work, but by doing work which you do not enjoy, hence, which is not satisfying. Second, the nerves are made irritable by being bathed in a toxic blood stream—you can not expect sound, healthy nerves in a sick body. Third, nervous vitality is being wasted through various channels, such as through eyestrain, through lack of rest, or through wrong habits of thinking. Fourth, nervousness is induced when a patient having a high-speed nervous system collides with a problem which he does not know how to solve — which is too much for him. This induces a continual conflict, with one part of the mind likely to be pulling in one direction and the other part pulling in the opposite direction, causing the waste of a vast fund of nervous energy, which when rightly placed at the disposal of the vital organs of the body would be productive of untold good.

Nervousness does not occur by chance, as in every case, there is present some definite physical or mental irritation which is disturbing the nerves and stealing away the normal nervous balance.

Nervousness may be attended by an endless variety of symptoms. However, the main symptoms of the nervous patient are these: He tires easily. He worries. He feels vaguely anxious or uneasy. He is strongly impressed by suggestion, imagining that he has any illness vividly suggested to him. He is open to fear in an unnatural degree. He expects the worst to happen. He is intensely aware of his feelings. In addition, he may be restless, irritable, prone to headache, "weak in the knees," or be disturbed by rapid beating of the heart or by indigestion. He is continually fighting his nerves and says his nerves are "on edge," or "jumpy." Sometimes he is bothered by a twitching of a muscle, the feeling of a tight band around the head, profuse sweating of the hands, or dizziness. Almost invariably, he is constipated.

Nervous patients often develop the mistaken idea that the outlook is hopeless and that they will never get well. This fear is unnecessary, for when the causes of nervousness are removed, a return to normal nervous stability becomes possible. In short, nervousness is curable.

Those wishing more information on nervousness are invited to send for my latest article, called "Helps for Nervous Patients." Forward your request to me in care of 1151 West Sixth St., Los Angeles, Calif. As the article is 4 pages long, I ask that you enclose 6 cents in stamps to help pay your part of mailing it back to you. Also, please enclose a large, self-addressed envelope. Send for the article and see if it will help you to understand better why you are nervous and what you should do to banish your nervous symptoms.

WILLOW WHISTLE FINDUM PAPA

There goes little Willow Whistle
On his dashing, prancing steed,
Willow Whistle wants to hurry,
But it does no good to plead!

Long-eared Speedy Fox, the burro,
Knows there isn't any need.

So he pokes with Willow Whistle,
Slowly on the desert trail,
With the dazzling, blinding swiftness
Of some broken-down old snail.

Just the same, they always get there—
They were never known to fail.

If you ask him where he's going
On a steed that seems asleep—
He'll just look at you and ponder
On some answer very deep.

"Me and donkey go find Papa,
He somewhere out here with sheep."

Most Etiquette Rules Merely Common Sense

By Deborah Ames

MANNERS, or etiquette, or whatever name you wish to call our general behavior, has changed a great deal since the days of our grandparents. I am very glad, for I never could remember all the silly little formalities that the young bride was supposed to have learned by the time she left the church door.

In court life, or in our own army and navy life there are certain rules of precedence that must be observed. Why one should call first on the C.O.'s wife is more than I can tell, but it must be done. However, in ordinary social life, matters of precedence have been reduced to a few sane and very sensible rules—the first of which is "Ladies first!" There are only a few exceptions to this rule. When ascending or descending stairs the woman goes first, unless there is danger of tripping or falling, or if there are several heavy doors to be opened, such as in going from one car of a train to another. In going in and out of a restaurant the woman always precedes, but in getting out of a car, the man alights first and offers his hand to the woman to assist her.

At the theater we find one of the exceptions to the rule. When there are tickets of admission, the person with the tickets always goes first. If it is a man, he goes down the aisle first, then stands aside and the woman enters first—by the way, the woman never takes the aisle seat when she is with a man. This is a carry-over from the old days when rowdies often made sitting on the aisle a precarious thing to do. In leaving, the woman precedes the man up the aisle. When two couples enter the theater together, the woman who is to have the farthest seat goes first, then the man who is to sit beside her.

In boxes at the theater or football game—the hostess takes the least desirable seat, giving the best view to the oldest guest, or to the guest of honor. Of course, at a circus, or a children's performance, the children take the front seats.

The bride issues at home cards and does not call until others have called upon her. A newcomer waits for her neighbors to call on her. If you glance over these rules, you'll see that most of them are just common sense. If you just remember that it's "Ladies first," unless there is some reason, such as high-ranking title, or dangerous stairs or heavy doors, you shouldn't encounter any difficulties.

I wish that if you get stuck with any small problems, you'd write me. Maybe I can help straighten them out.

Menu Of The Week

By Joan Andrews

FOR any occasion when you want something almost sensationally good looking for your main dish—whether it's a Sunday supper or a bridge luncheon—a tinted wheel salad will fill the bill. Here is an attractive and appetizing, but very simple, menu:

Cream of Mushroom Soup
Tiny Toasted Cheese Sandwiches
Tinted Wheel Salad
Hot Rolls Grape Jelly
Coffee Marlow
Coconut Kisses

For the salad you need 8 small slices of pineapple. Pour the syrup from the canned pineapple into 2 small bowls and tint the contents of one rose and the other green. Place 4 slices of pineapple in each bowl of colored juice and let stand until the pineapple is tinted. Combine 1 cup shredded cabbage, 1½ cups apple cubes, ¼ cup chopped, salted almonds, and 6 or 8 maraschino cherries with some French dressing. Place a spoonful of this mixture on crisp lettuce in the center of four salad plates. Arrange a slice of rose and a slice of green pineapple over each mound with several long, thin slices of crisp celery through the centers. Serve with your favorite dressing.

To make coffee marlow, melt 20 marshmallows in 1 cup of strong coffee over hot water, stirring until mixture is smooth. Add ¼ teaspoon of salt and cool. When cold and slightly stiffened, carefully combine with ½ pint stiffly beaten cream. Freeze in tray of mechanical refrigerator.

DINNER by noon!

Well, why not? If you will hastily run over in your mind the dinner dishes which you prepare over and over again, I wager that you will be surprised at the large number which you can easily and conveniently prepare before the noon hour. Also you will probably be forced to admit that these dishes are palatable when prepared several hours before they are to be served.

Why before noon? That question almost answers itself these warm days. Probably the first reason is—to keep our kitchens, our homes, and ourselves cool during the hottest part of the day. Occasionally we must place foods over the flame or in the oven for a very short time. But, for the most part, we are relieved of further responsibility for the meal, with the exception of its service. In December our mouths water with the thought of a savory dish, steaming hot. How different it is in August. When dinner times comes, we demand cool sparkling drinks, frozen salads and desserts, something which may be quickly prepared in a cool kitchen, and something which may be taken to a cool place to eat.

Other nations—England, Russia, Japan—may proclaim tea, served hot, as their national beverage. America, however, does not have to share honors when it comes to iced tea. It was developed in America and nowhere else in the world is it so popularly demanded in hot weather.

SPICED TEA

- 2 Lemons
- 2 Oranges
- ½ Cup sugar
- 4 Cups water
- ¼ Teaspoon cinnamon
- 4 Whole cloves
- 5 Heaping teaspoons tea

DISSOLVE sugar in a little water. To this syrup, add the juice from lemons and oranges, including shreds of lemon and orange rind, the cloves and cinnamon. Boil water and pour over tea; steep for 5 minutes; strain and pour over other ingredients. After thoroughly chilling, serve in tall glasses, garnished with mint leaves. This quantity sufficient for 6 glasses.

GRAPEFRUIT TEA PUNCH

- 1 Can grapefruit juice
- 1 Can pineapple juice

Modern Version Of "Shell Game" Revealed To Wizardo Students

THE shell game: "Watch the little pea, ladies and gentlemen, a dollar to the man who can tell me which walnut shell it's hidden under!"

How many times have you heard this "lingo" as you stood with a group of onlookers watching the old-time "con" man or circus magician work his magic with the three walnut shells and pea?

And if you happened to be one of those inclined to speculate on the whereabouts of the "elusive pea," did you ever win a bet? Probably not, for the old "shell game," though innocent in appearance, is just another magic trick and unless you know the secret it is impossible to "find the pea."

Our magic trick for today is called, "The Bewildering Boxes," a new and modern way of working the old three walnut shells and pea trick. EFFECT: The performer shows three ordinary safety match boxes and hands them out for examination. Two of the boxes are empty, but the third contains a dozen matches. Laying the boxes in a row on a table the magician remarks:

"Even though these boxes are closed, it is a simple matter for us to tell which box contains the matches. All we have to do is pick it up and shake it like this—(pick up the box containing the matches and shake it)—and we can hear the matches bouncing around inside."

"Now I want you to keep your eye on this box containing the matches and to make it easy for you to follow, I will shake it every now and then."

The magician mixes the boxes around on the table, changing their positions and occasionally shaking the box with the matches in it. Finally, giving the box a shake so that the matches can be distinctly heard rattling inside, he places it on the table between the other two and asks some member of the audience to pick out the box containing the matches.

NATURALLY, it must be the box between the other two, since the matches are heard in-

- 1 Cup tea (double strength)
- 1 Quart ginger ale
- ½ Cup sugar
- Sliced lemon
- Mint

Mix sugar with fruit juices and tea. Chill. Just before serving, pour in ginger ale. Garnish with lemon and mint. Serves six.

SALAD ROYALE

- 2 Cups of tea
- 2 Tablespoons gelatin
- ½ Cup beef bouillon
- ¼ Cup lemon juice
- 2 Tablespoons vinegar
- 1 Green pepper, chopped fine
- ½ Cup sugar
- 1 Cup finely shredded cabbage or mixed vegetables
- 2 Cups celery, cut in small pieces
- Salt and paprika

SOFTEN gelatin in bouillon 5 minutes. Mix with freshly made tea that has been reheated to boiling point after straining. Add vinegar, lemon juice, sugar and salt. Strain and cool. When it thickens, add remaining ingredients and pour in wet mold and chill. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise or salad dressing.

CHILI CHEESE SALAD

- 4 Teaspoons gelatin
- 3 Tablespoons cold water
- 1 Cup chili sauce
- ½ Cup mayonnaise
- ½ Teaspoon salt
- 1 Cup cream, whipped
- 1 Cup cottage cheese

SOAK gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes and dissolve over hot water. Combine chili sauce with cottage cheese, mayonnaise and salt. Fold in the whipped cream and turn into ring mold that has been rinsed with cold water. Place in refrigerator to chill. Unmold on serving platter. Garnish with lettuce and alternate sections of grapefruit, and avocado pear which have been marinated in French dressing.

REFRIGERATOR PIE

- 1½ Cups canned pumpkin (strained)
- 1 Teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 Teaspoon ginger
- 1 Cup whipped cream
- 1 Cup powdered sugar
- ½ Teaspoon salt
- 3 Egg yolks, beaten well
- 3 Egg whites, beaten stiff

Saves Kitchen Labor

During the Warm Days of August, A Well Filled Refrigerator Is A Housewife's Best Friend. It Will Save Her Many Arduous Hours Over the Kitchen Range.

TO PUMPKIN add the spices, sugar, salt, and egg yolks. Cook in double boiler until it thickens, stirring constantly. Let it cool slowly for a few minutes, then fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites, and then two-thirds cup of whipped cream, and reserve the remainder for the topping. Place in the freezer tray until thoroughly chilled and partially frozen. Before serving, pack into a baked pie shell. Top with whipped cream and serve.

A cornflake crust may be used, such as the following:

- 1 Cup crushed cornflakes (4 cups of flakes crushed will yield 1 cup crumbs)
- ½ Cup melted butter
- 3 Tablespoons powdered sugar

Roll cornflakes flat, then measure and combine with melted butter and sugar. Press ingredients until mixture holds its shape. Pat into deep 9 inch pie tin, pressing firmly until ¼ inch thick. Chill in refrigerator until firm. Also, vanilla wafers may be used.

REFRIGERATOR CAKE

- 2 Eggs
- ½ Cup sugar
- 1 Square chocolate
- 1 Teaspoon gelatin
- 3 Tablespoons cold water
- 3 Tablespoons boiling water
- ½ Teaspoon vanilla
- Lady fingers or cake strips

BEAT egg yolks till thick and lemon-colored, add sugar, melt chocolate over water, add gelatin soaked in cold water and dissolved in boiling water. Fold in egg white, beaten until stiff. Flavor. Line mold with some lady fingers or cake strips, pour in mixture. Add alternate layers of cake and chocolate mixture until mold is filled. Chill in refrigerator 24 hours. Serve plain or with whipped cream. (Serves 8.)

CREME DE MENTHE ICE

- 3 Cups water
- 1 Cup sugar
- ¼ Cup creme de menthe syrup
- ½ Cup lemon juice
- ½ Teaspoon salt
- Green coloring

MAKE a syrup of water and sugar. Cool. Add remaining ingredients. Place in freezing tray. When frozen to a mush, beat for 2 minutes, then continue freezing. (Serves 6.)

SOAPBOX SONNETS

By Ione Williamson

WE WANT TO KNOW

WE want to know,
We can't figure out,
Why a New York audience
Must shriek and shout.

Why do they yell
And make such a fuss?
Those big broadcast jokes
Sound dull to us.

What seems so funny
To a New York crowd, Can't make us even Laugh out loud.

They may be highbrow,
We may be low—
But some of those big shots
Give a pretty punk show.

We live out here
In the sticks—
As a matter of fact,
We're just plain hicks.

But what we think,
We're going to say:
How do New Yorkers
Get that way?

They laugh at this,
They roar at that;
They simply howl
When the show falls flat.

The reason for this Might be, we'd say,

Kitchen Tips

LEMON juice and salt make a fine dressing for avocado. So, too, does catsup, all by itself. A good Hawaiian custom.

Combine juice of canned beets or tomato juice and canned beef broth. Garnish with minced parsley.

Add a small amount, about ½ cup, of flour to the creamed sugar and shortening of a cake before adding eggs or milk. It will prevent curdling.

When not using all the pimento in the can cover with hot paraffin. Cooking or salad oil may be used instead and later used for salad dressing. Keep cool.

Warm Brazil nuts in the oven before cracking them. The heat makes it possible to break the shell without breaking the meat.

"Abandon Ship" ~ Men And Courage Go To Sea

A Stirring Story Of War Days When German U-Boats Swept The Seas — What One Man Did For A Woman

By Arthur Styron

THERE was a terrific crash. The President trembled violently from keel-plate to mast-head. Whitey and Gunner's-mate Smith, scrambling through the fo'c'sle hatch, felt the fine, salt spray cut their faces as the merchantman plunged into a mountainous wave.

"It's ten minutes before eight bells. Let's see if the 12-pounder is all right," said Whitey eagerly. "Oh, all right," growled Smith. He pretended a vast indifference, but secretly he was flattered by the young coal-passer's admiration for his gun and envy of his command of her.

"I've got a hunch," said Whitey, after watching his friend manipulate the breech-lock for a while, "that something's going to happen tonight."

"Something is happening," said Gunner's-mate Smith.

"I mean something real," said Whitey, with a regular sailor-man's contempt of the elements. "I feel it in my bones."

"Rheumatism," explained Smith laconically. "Shoveling coal does that."

"Go to hell. Maybe we'll meet a submarine."

"No chance," said Smith. "We're still in mid-ocean; subs can't cruise this far out."

"It's nine days since we left Norfolk. We ought to be pretty close to Ireland —"

"We've been zig-zagging. Even when we get to the danger-zone, we'll have a convoy of destroyers from Brest or Queenstown tagging after us, so there won't be any chance of a U-boat attack." Smith's tone was full of grief. "Hell, I'd like to take a pot-shot at one of those iron-men."

"I would too," said Whitey enthusiastically.

Smith said — a little less beligerently: "Guess you'll have to stick at your station in the coal-bunker, Whitey."

Whitey sighed. "Guess I will."

OUT of the gloom on the quarter-deck appeared a tall, slender figure swathed in a long cape, stepping lightly. Whitey knew it was Miss Emerson taking her evening walk.

In his mind, Whitey was somewhat confused as to which was the more beautiful — Miss Emerson in her blue nurse's uniform, or the new 12-pounder.

In a way, the two were inextricably associated; for Miss Emerson, too, admired the 12-pounder, and always in her walks stopped to admire the gun and talk with the boys about it.

A sea struck the President abeam; the bridge tarpaulins rattled applause, and the ship rolled with a sudden lurch. Smith put out his hand to steady the nurse. Mumbling something about having to go on watch, Whitey fled and stumbled through the nearest hatch. It was dam' familiar of Smith to put his paw on her like that.

He felt better when he had relieved his watch and fallen to work with his shovel. He began to sing in a hoarse, somewhat uncertain voice.

"Here, sailor, straighten your necktie and fall to." The ship's cook, bearing a huge pail of hot, black coffee, and a slat-basket of sandwiches, entered the bunker.

Whitey was in the act of dipping a second helping of coffee when there was a violent crash — immediately followed by the sound of ripping steel and timbers. The ship lurched heavily, throwing both men to the deck.

"What a sea," cried Whitey. "Sea my eye!" gasped the cook, not noticing he was drenched with coffee. "Something must have hit us..."

The sudden calm that ensued, broken as it was only by the throb of the engines and the swish of water against the hull was ghastly. The ship still quivered from the impact.

From somewhere there was the faint, ghostly sound of running feet. Then — a harsh clanging of bells — the weird wailing of a siren. General Quarters! Whitey's thoughts immediately concentrated on his hunch. A U-boat had attacked the ship!

The President was now alive with activity. There were sounds of men running, the harsh clang of metal as water-tight doors were slammed and secured.

Then another sound came to the solitary young coal-passer in the bunker: a series of nearby minor explosions. Whitey recognized immediately what it was — the 12-pounder was speaking. Tears of excitement and disappointment came into Whitey's eyes; he began to shovel coal desperately to restrain himself from rushing above deck.

A sinister noise, like the soft hissing of a rattlesnake, obtruded itself into his consciousness. Whitey, glancing aft, saw a small stream of water swirling over the deck, as the shrill sound of the siren, followed by the muffled notes of a bugle, came down to him.

Abandon Ship! The black gang began leaving their stations on the double. "Come on, Whitey, she's sinking!" called out an oiler.

By the time Whitey had reached the main deck, the President had lost all headway and was wallowing helplessly in the trough. Morning was breaking, and in the faint light he could just distinguish a vague, writhing mass a few hundred yards off the starboard bow. A ship — probably a German raider — had rammed the President and then opened fire.

Suddenly he remembered: Miss Emerson!

The last lifeboat had already been swung over on its davits; only the rafts were left for the crew. Silent men, like wraiths in the semi-darkness, were running to their stations. Whitey, turning to retrace his steps aft where the cabins lay, collided with a sailor.

"Hey!" gasped the man. "Where you going?"

"I've got to rescue a lady!" gasped Whitey.

HE knew the cabin Miss Emerson had occupied with three other nurses. Had he not often found excuses to walk by her porthole hoping to get a glimpse of her? In a few moments he was there. The cabin was empty. Miss Emerson was already saved! Gulping down his disappointment, Whitey started forward — when he caught sight of the 12-pounder, her muzzle pointed proudly upward — alone and abandoned.

The next instant the illuminating idea came to him. Perhaps it would be something to remember as long as he lived. And if he did not live, he would have the consolation of knowing he had done something.

In thirty seconds Whitey had reached the gun and was throwing out the exploded cap. Another thirty seconds — and he had found a live projectile, thrust it home, and screwed in the breech-plug. Squinting through the telescope, he carefully trained and pointed the 12-pounder. Having observed that the stricken ship was abandoned and sinking, the raider was now getting rapidly under way. There was not a moment to be lost.

As the President steadied between two seas, Whitey took careful aim and pressed the firing key. There was a sharp report, and a thin wisp of smoke was quickly dissipated by the wind. The missile hurtled through the air; the next instant there was a sharp explosion at the stern of the disappearing raider. He had scored a hit!

The Germans—who had ceased firing when they saw the merchantman being abandoned — answered at once. A shell pierced the merchantman's side forward. Giving a wild whoop, Whitey rushed to the railing and prepared to dive off the stern. A faint cry told him the direction of the nearest raft. Strong arms helped drag him out of the sea.

"You dam' fool," hissed a burly sailor, "what made you fire that gun? Now they'll think we're a Q-ship and shell our lifeboats." Whitey recognized the voice of Gunner's-mate Smith!

The Germans' fire, however, did not last long. Even before they had lost sight of the President, that gallant little vessel threw her bow high in the air and settled quietly to her grave beneath the stormy waves.

After a long silence Smith again spoke to Whitey. "That was me you collided with on the deck. . . . Did you go back just to fire that gun?"

"Maybe," said Whitey. Then he asked: "Did Miss Emerson get away all right?"

Smith gave him a keen look. "The women left in the first lifeboats, of course. I myself looked after Miss Emerson."

DAY came with a dreadful shrieking of the elements, and the shipwrecked men were compelled to cling to the life-lines with all their strength to keep from being washed off the raft as wave after wave struck them.

It must have been about four bells when the sound of distant firing became audible. For a full minute the men on the raft remained silent and tense, as if afraid their ears were deceiving them. Then, as the firing continued, they became suddenly alert.

The officer gave a faint whoop.

"Hurrah! The patrol ships must have got our SOS!"

"There's fighting, so there must be an Allied ship!" cried Smith. The officer was eagerly searching in the strong-box always kept lashed to each lifeboat. "We'll give them a Very signal to let them know we're here."

The next moment he had fired the Very pistol, sending a rocket speeding into the lowering sky to burst aloft into fiery spray. "No use wasting another one right now — they can't come while they're engaged. We'll shoot one when the firing stops."

It was now almost dark, and two more precious rockets had been fired. Then — the eager ears of the men detected the unmistakable churn of swift propellers. Almost immediately the thin, pencil-like beam of a searchlight began to play on the turbulent waters. The men raised a mighty shout, and the officer fired a rocket — his last one.

But it was enough. It was an American destroyer, and an hour later they were all safely on board.

"Water — grub — smokes!" the survivors were thinking.

Next morning Whitey was called to the captain's cabin.

When Whitey entered the cabin he found the President's captain and Gunner's-mate Smith talking with the skipper of the destroyer. The latter gravely motioned Whitey to be seated.

"I understand, White, that you fired a shot at the raider after the President had been abandoned?"

Whitey glanced at Gunner's-mate Smith. So Smith had betrayed him! The gob was grinning broadly. "Yes, sir," Whitey answered.

The skipper cleared his throat. "Are you aware that you dam-

The smile faded from Smith's face. "Of all the nerve."

THE skipper smiled. "That was remarkable shooting, Whitey," he said. He looked the boy over carefully. "I see that you're wearing a Navy uniform. How'd you like to wear it all the time?"

"Well, you see, sir, I'm —" he couldn't say "only sixteen" with Smith's eye fixed on him — "I'm a little under age, and my father wouldn't give his consent."

"We'll fix that," said the skipper. "I'll radio to America and get his permission, and enlist you here on the destroyer. I'm requesting that Gunner's-mate Smith and his crew be ordered here, too!"

"Can I be in a gun crew, sir?" The skipper spoke carefully. "I certainly think that's the place for you."

"Thank you, sir."

"Will you have a cigarette?" asked the skipper.

"No thank you, sir, I don't smoke —" A glance at Smith's face made him realize his mistake which he amended by adding "cigarettes. But if I could have a cigar —"

"Certainly," said the surprised officer.

Whitey saluted smartly and left the cabin, followed by a chastened gunner's-mate. "Well, of all the crust —" he was beginning, when he had to pause to give gangway to an approaching couple — a junior Naval officer with gold braid on his sleeves, and a tall young woman wearing a blue cape lined with red. Miss Emerson!

"Now what do you think of that!" said Gunner's-mate Smith.

"With a war going on, to," said Whitey loftily in the voice of a man dismissing mere trivialities forever from his life. Frowning deeply, he stuck his cigar between his teeth and addressed his shipmate: "Suppose we examine the guns now, Smith."
